Lewis Gets $3 Increase In Illinois Coal Contract

New Showdown With WLB Seen When Agreement Is Submitted

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board prepared for another showdown with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, yesterday with the announcement at U. M. W. headquarters of the signing of an agreement with Illinois soft coal producers calling for settlement of portal to portal claims at $1.25 a day along with provision for an extra hour's work each day at time and a half rates—an additional $1.50 a day compensation.

The adjustment also included the 25 cents worth of minor concessions already ordered by the War Labor Board, thus increasing the original basic underground rate of $7 a day for a 7-hour day to a new total of $10 for an 8-hour day ($7 plus $1.25 plus $1.50 plus 25 cents)—in effect a $3 a day boost for the 30,500 miners involved.

May Ask Joint Action

The agreement was submitted to the War Labor Board for approval by George F. Campbell, president of the Illinois Coal Operators Association. The U. M. W., which has repeatedly refused to recognize WLB's jurisdiction over the coal wage dispute, did not submit any application for approval to WLB.

Campbell specified that the agreement was not to go into effect until the Office of Price Administration approved a coal price boost to "cover the increased cost occasioned thereby."

It was learned that WLB may require that the application for approval be submitted jointly by both the operators and miners in accordance with its regular procedure, before considering the petition. It was regarded as likely that the board would then proceed to hold a public hearing on the request, summoning Lewis and the operators before it to explain the agreement.

Lewis has thus far refused to answer WLB calls to appear on this case, but since the last summons was ignored, the Connally-Smith Act, arming the board with subpena power, was passed. Use of this new power to compel Lewis' appearance was regarded as entirely possible.

Two-Year Contract

Securing the agreement represented the start of a new offensive by Lewis—an effort to use the Illinois pact as a lever to secure similar agreements from the rest of the industry as a basis for returning to their owners the Government-seized mines.

Under the agreement, Lewis undertook to raise his present six-

Baby Abandoned In Vestibule Of Apartment

A baby boy, about two weeks old, was found abandoned in the vestibule of an apartment house at 950 Twenty-fifth Street Northwest, last night by Raymond C. Toomey, a resident of the building.

He told police of the Third Precinct that he was coming into the apartment house about 11 p. m. when he heard the baby crying.

The baby was dressed in an embroidered dress, wrapped in a blue blanket and had a half-filled bottle of milk. There were no marks of identification about him.

The child was taken to the Women's Bureau and was to have been transferred to Gallinger Hospital later.

Aims at Black Market

Army Seizes Poultry From Trucks on Road

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Army yesterday started requisitioning poultry needed for the armed forces by stopping trucks on a Delaware highway and taking over their poultry loads at ceiling prices.

This move, first recommended by the Senate Small Business Committee as a means of wiping out black markets, is the first step in a drive the Office of Price Administration last night said might become Nation-wide. It was undertaken with a two-fold object in mind:

1. To assist OPA in wiping out a principal source of the poultry black market in the East.

2. To obtain meat for soldiers, who have been penalized because the Army must stick to legal ceiling prices.

The first requisition was made on Route 13, just outside Dover, with Delaware State police acting as the truck-stopping medium.

Over this highway, according to OPA, move great numbers of trucks carrying approximately four million pounds of poultry weekly from the Delmarva Peninsula area.

The Army needs at least one million pounds of this weekly supply, it was said, and has been able to obtain only a "small fraction" of it.

OPA asked the Army to take the initiative in the test venture and power for the action was granted by the War Food Administration

Washington Gets No More Chickens

Empty chicken crates yesterday filled Washington wholesale poultry houses where dealers said they had failed to receive a single shipment since July 10. Meanwhile poultry poured into New York, where official reports show dealers are paying a "premium" to producers over ceiling prices.

Chris Vanture, manager of the Plymouth Farms Poultry Co., which normally handles 50,000 to 70,000 pounds of chickens a week, said yesterday that the dearth of chickens here was caused by the New York dealers going to the Eastern Shore of Maryland and into Delaware and paying as high as 40 cents a pound for the live birds, when the ceiling price is 28¼ cents a pound.

"Since July 10 we have received no shipments of chickens," Vanture said.

3d Bond Goal Is Fixed at 15 Billions

Largest Financing Program in History To Start Sept. 9; Banks Ruled Out

A 15-billion-dollar goal for the third war loan drive was announced last night by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who said only nonbanking sources will participate.

The goal for the largest financing program in world history is two billion dollars above that of the second war loan drive in April, which brought in a total of $18,500,000,000, but of that amount banks bought more than five billion dollars.

The third war loan drive will open September 9, and Morgenthau said the securities, to be essentially the same types as those sold in the second war loan, will be offered only to individuals, corporations, insurance companies and other nonbanking sources.

House-to-House Campaign

"This goal and the third war loan program," he said, "was determined by Treasury officials after receiving recommendations from chairmen of the State war finance committees and officials of the Federal Reserve System and the American Bankers Association. Getting this amount of money will be a huge task and will represent the largest financing program in the history of the world.

"The job of raising this 15 billion dollars will be handled by war finance committees of each State, and the bonds will be sold largely by hundreds of thousands of patriotic volunteer salesmen, who already have made plans to concentrate on house-to-house selling, since a major consideration is increasing the number of people who are buying war bonds."

Shangri-La Fund Grows

The first war loan drive held last December aimed at a nine-billion-dollar goal but actually raised nearly 13 billion dollars. In both of the previous drives banking sources have been limited roughly to approximately five billion dollars.

Although none of the securities in the September drive will be available to commercial banks, Morgenthau said that shortly after the drive terminates a 2 per cent bond and a seven-eighths per cent certificate of indebtedness will be offered to such banks.

Spurred by the promise their dollars will be converted into an aircraft carrier, the U. S. S. Shangri-La, with the specific assignment of bombing Tokyo again, Americans are responding with alacrity to the July war stamp drive, the Treasury reported yesterday.

Quarter Mark Reached

Although officials of the War Savings Staff said they probably will not have a Nation-wide total until early next month, they said scattered, preliminary reports indicate the campaign has reached the three-quarter mark of the 180 million dollar goal.

The carrier, to be christened the Shangri-La at President Roosevelt's direction, will cost approximately 130 million dollars—the amount to be raised above the 50 million dollars monthly average of war stamp sales. The name of the ship comes from the President's facetious designation of the base from which Tokyo was bombed early in the war. At that time the fact a carrier was used was a secret.

Half of Sicily in Allied Hands As Enna Falls; Foe Fleeing East; Two Red Armies Nearing Orel

Soviets Now Only 9 Miles From Base After Taking Points On Fringe of Town

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 21.—Russian armies stormed to within 9 miles of Orel and 11 miles to the east today in advances of 4 to 9 miles which overran more than 90 populated places on the fringes of the great German base, 200 miles south of Moscow.

Even as the German armies were forced back, they were fighting resolutely, mounting repeated counter-attacks with tanks and infantry, a special Soviet communique announced tonight. Earlier, Reuters news agency reported that the Russians were 7 miles east of Orel.

To the south in the Donets Basin to which the violent summer battle had spread, the Russians said they improved their positions south of Izyum and southwest of Voroshilovgrad in "fighting of local importance." Earlier Moscow dispatches had suggested that these skirmishes might be a prelude to a mighty Russian effort to liberate the whole rich Ukraine, and place the Russians within reach of the Balkans.

Drive From North

Thundering down from the north upon Orel, which is threatened with encirclement, a Russian army was said to have seized 40 populated places "including three railway stations, one of them 15 kilometers (9 miles) northeast of Orel." The station was not named, but probably was Optukha, which is at the location named.

A second army driving in frontally from the east "occupied" over 50 populated places, said the communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor. These included the district center and railway station of Mokhavaya, and the railway station of Zolotarevo, 11 miles east of Orel. Five of the captured localities were described as large.

The third Russian army driving up from the south was meeting the toughest German opposition."

"In the face of heavy fire, enemy resistance and counterattacks, our troops forged ahead," the Russians said.

The threat was most imminent to Orel but an equally important German base and rail hub at Bryansk was also imperiled. A Russian column had captured Buky and was within 35 miles of Bryansk and within 5 miles of the important railway linking Bryansk to Orel. Buky is north of Orel, but is about 40 miles farther west than that enemy strong point.

Gain Near Belgorod

For the second day, the Russians said their troops had advanced in the Belgorod region 165 miles south of Orel. It was there that the Germans scored their lone advances in he abortive offensive they launched July 5, only to have their shock absorbed and reversed by the Red Army.

The Soviet midnight communique amplifying with many incidents of specific advances the gains already announced in the special bulletin listed Germans killed totaling 5800 men. In the Orel sector alone, the Russians said, they destroyed or disabled 77 tanks and shot down 131 planes. They ran the German losses since July 5 to 3593 tanks,

Allies Capture Enna

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IN CENTRAL SICILY—United States and Canadian troops have captured Enna, in central Sicily, it was announced yesterday, while British forces have battered closer to Catania, on the east coast. Arrows indicate drives. Heavy, black line is approximate front

Important Road, Rail Center Taken; Eighth Army Still Pounding at Catania

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 21.—American and Canadian troops have captured the central road hub of Enna to control half of Sicily, and tonight demoralized Axis troops had begun a general retreat toward the escape port of Messina 2 miles opposite the Italian mainland.

Enna also is the "back door" to Catania, 40 miles to the east, where the British Eighth Army had pressed back a stubborn German foe to the southern suburbs of that port. British warships still were pumping shells into the city, whose fall would pave the way for an Axis rout similar to the Cap Bon disaster in North Africa.

Of the ferocious struggle around Catania, key to eastern Sicily, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief, said:

"The Germans had attempted to establish a very strong line, including Mount Etna, on the east and to do so brought certain formations from the Italian mainland."

Axis Troops Isolated

American and Canadian armored columns seized the mountain fortress of Enna yesterday and pounded on after an enemy whom Allied observers said was withdrawing northeastward apparently for a last stand in the Messina area or below there on the 55-mile road leading to Catania.

The fall of Enna, a war prize through the centuries, isolated large number of Axis troops in western Sicily whose only effective means of escape is along a northern coastal road 30 miles above the advancing Americans and Canadians.

Catania's defenders also were cut off from inland Sicily except for that circuitous northern road, and presumably some of the Canadians have turned eastward to outflank the Germans on the coast who were fighting one of the most fercious battles since their unsuccessful stand at the Mareth Line in southern Tunisia.

Face Bitter Fighting

Gerbini and its neighboring airdromes are 30 miles east of Enna, and the Germans apparently had withdrawn most of their units from central Sicily to defend the Catania area. General Eisenhower, in an interview here, said the Americans were meeting weaker resistance in their rapid advance, "thus overrunning substantial portions of the island and confining the enemy to progressively smaller areas."

The general expressed confidence in a complete Allied victory on the island, but said the British and

WLB Rejects Shipbuilders' Wage Demand

Million Affected

The War Labor Board has rejected the demand of more than one million shipbuilding workers for a general wage increase to compensate them for advances in the cost of living during the past year, it was learned yesterday.

The action, taken by an 8 to 4 vote with labor members dissenting, was based on application of the board's 15 per cent "Little Steel" wage yardstick.

The shipbuilders' related request for classification of intermediate rates of pay was referred to a panel for study and recommendation, it was learned. Shipyard workers are among the highest paid in the country with first class mechanics paid at the rate of $1.20 an hour.

Announcement of the action was withheld pending preparation of a formal opinion by Board Chairman William H. Davis.

A wage increase of 9 per cent was requested by the C. I. O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America. The American Federation of Labor Metal Trades Department made no specific demand, but contended that a substantial wage increase was due because of the failure to hold the cost of living in line during the past year.

The two unions contended that their members waived a portion of a wage increase due last year in return for a promise from President Roosevelt to hold the cost of living at then prevailing levels.

More than 185 shipyards were involved in the wage decision. Shipyard wages have been stabilized by agreement with the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee of the War Production Board. The stabilization contracts call for an annual wage review. This year, the shipbuilding committee requested WLB to make the review because of the stabilization program.

Cox to Probe Charges FCC Perils Liberty

Claims Letters Declare Free Press, Speech Menaced

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia said yesterday he was prepared to investigate charges, which he said were coming to him almost daily in letters, that the Federal Communications Commission has used its licensing powers to destroy free radio and free speech.

At the same time, the FCC replied to repeated charges presented to Cox's committee investigating the agency by its counsel, Eugene Garey, that its Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service was useless. In a formal FCC statement presented to reporters, Dr. Robert Leigh, FBIS director, said that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower had made the original request for FCC personnel to be assigned to North Africa, and cited correspondence as proof.

Policies Criticized

The committee gave most of its session to hearing T. A. M. Craven, a member of the Communications Commission, testify on its policies, which he criticized on a number of counts. He said that FCC Chairman James Lawrence Fly dominated the commission, and that other members "let him get away with it."

Craven said he agreed with Committee Counsel Garey that it was not unusual for the FCC to do things for which it had no authority, but he added that the Supreme Court did not agree. He suggested that the committee consider writing into law a definition of what the chairman's duties are, "so that we

State Department Rules Over OEW

The State Department has emerged in supreme control of foreign economic activities, James F. Byrnes, director of war mobilization said yesterday.

This development followed the recent dispute over foreign purchases which saw Vice President Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Jones bitterly criticizing each other's activities.

She Was Losing Money

Woman Finds Living Costs Too High—Quits Her Job

That old demon, high cost of living, yesterday convinced a Department of Agriculture employe that she is running behind in actual cash $3.82 weekly by keeping her $160-monthly job and paying a maid to stay with her 3-month-old baby.

And, frightened by sheer statistics, she is giving up her job. Here is what she figured:

Her base pay is $70 semimonthly with $15.16 overtime, totaling $85.16. Of that, she pays $3.50 for retirement fund and $18 withholding tax. Then she invests $8.50 every pay day in war bonds, leaving her $55.16 every two weeks or $27.58 weekly.

She must pay a maid $15 each week for staying with her baby five days a week and doing no laundry (except the baby's) and no cooking. She eats two meals daily and gets her carfare—which, from the District to nearby Virginia is $2.40 weekly. The lady of the house figures that the maid consumes 50 cents worth of food at breakfast and lunch each day.

For her own transportation to the office she pays $2.40 weekly and $3 for her food. She allows herself a rock-bottom figure of $3.60 weekly for laundry, dry cleaning, hose and other miscellaneous items. A maid to care for the baby on the sixth day (which the other nurse does not work) costs an additional $2. So her outlay totals $31.40—and she is behind her budget by $3.82 weekly.

"I hate to be unpatriotic and quit my job," she declared yesterday, "but honestly—it's too big an investment, that's all."

'Not a Prediction'

Byrnes Hopes Soon to Release More Goods for Civilian Use

More goods may be produced for consumption by civilians as a result of continuing review of production and procurement programs started by the Office of War Mobilization, Director James F. Byrnes revealed yesterday.

Emphasizing that he was expressing a "hope, not a prediction," Byrnes stated, "It is possible in some instances that procurement officers, anxious to secure commodities, placed contracts for as much as they could induce manufacturers to deliver.

"As the war proceeded," Byrnes said, "we have learned that some of the things we thought we needed in 1941, we now do not need. Manpower and materials can then be released to where they are sorely needed."

The home-front chief declared that the prime purpose of his recent directive to all war agencies to review their procurement schedules is increased efficiency in the war production effort.

Byrnes also announced the appointment of John M. Hancock, New York industrial banker, to take charge of "progress reporting" on the sweeping revision of departmental procurement schedules.

"We may find that changes can be made to release more materials for civilians. But do not get overoptimistic about this. The aim is to get a more effective production for war."

As an example of what he seeks to avoid, Byrnes recalled that after the last war, "there was more harness than horses in the country."

Byrnes announced the following appointments as liaison officers between the OWM and the procurement agencies: Maritime Commission, Fred Searls; Lend-Lease, Maj. Gen. Henry S. Aurand; Navy, William F. Gibbs; War, Frederick Pope.

No liaison official was appointed with the War Production Board, he said, because WPB does not handle procurement. WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson and Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson will be informed promptly of any changes in production schedules to enable them to arrange for the prompt use of released critical materials, he Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Thursday), July 22.—Allied bombers poured 133 tons of bombs upon Bairoko Harbor on New Georgia yesterday in the heaviest air raid of the Southwest Pacific war, while American troops sent Japanese jungle fighters reeling back after an unsuccessful counterattack at Munda.

More than 150 bombers—Dauntless and Avengers—with a strong fighter cover participated in the assault on Bairoko, which lasted throughout the day.

The communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said it was the heaviest raid ever made by either the Allies or the Japanese in the war theater.

The communique said the raid was made in support of our ground forces, indicating American troops on the northern tip of New Georgia were advancing against Bairoko Harbor, which lies about 8 miles north of the Japanese key base at Munda.

The Japanese also received another setback in swirling dogfights over Madang, New Guinea. A comparatively small force of swift Lightning fighters destroyed 19 Japanese Zeros and probably shot

Five Air Bases Raided in Italy And Sardinia

Allied Bombers Revisit Scenes Of Earlier Blows

By Clinton Green
International News Service Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 21.—Their softening-up campaign against embattled Sicily virtually concluded, Allied airmen yesterday carried out devastating preinvasion assaults against five air bases on the Italian mainland and the outpost island of Sardinia.

'Round-the-clock shuttle raids heaped new ruins on top of old at the Sardinian airdrome of Decimomannu, the southern Italian fields of Vibo Valentia, Monte Corvino and Capo Dichino, and the Aquino air base north of Naples, it was announced today.

The Vibo Valentia field on Italy's toe, immediate goal of any landing assault on the southern mainland, was blasted in night and day raids by warplanes from the Middle East and northwest Africa.

Follow-Up Assault

Huge R. A. F. Halifaxes joined with four-motored Liberators Monday night in igniting a sea of flames among hangars and administration buildings. None of the Halifaxes was lost.

American Marauder bombers and Lightning fighters from northwest Africa followed up with a daylight wave-bombing assault that "completely covered" the airdrome with well-placed bombs, returning airmen said. The second wave of bombers and strafing planes to roar over the target found the hangars already gutted.

What was officially described as a "large force" of R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. Wellington bombers ignited at least 30 fires at Aquino while Canadian-flown Wellingtons executed a simultaneous assault on Capo Dichono.

Choice of Targets Limited

The strategic Monte Corvino field in southern Italy was battered in successive daylight raids by American Mitchell bombers and Lightning fighters. At least 12 grounded enemy planes were left blazing.

With more than 50 per cent of Sicily in Allied hands, airmen's choice of targets on the invaded island was limited. But South African Air Force Bostons Monday

Peace Prayers Urged

Papal Letter Expresses Grief At Damage to Rome Basilica

By the Associated Press

London, July 21.—The Vatican radio broadcast today the text of a letter from Pope Pius XII to his vicar general for the district of Rome, Francesco Cardinal Marchetti-Salvaggiani, deploring Monday's bombing of the Italian capital and calling upon Catholics the world over to pray for a speedy peace.

In the letter, broadcast in English and recorded here by the Associated Press, the pontiff cited the historical, cultural and religious importance of Rome, and then said:

"All that we put before competent authorities on several occasions in clear terms, recommending them in the name of human dignity and of Christian civilization the inviolability of Rome."

The Pope stated he had felt justified in hoping that the papal authority and its impartiality "would have secured us the consolation, among such bitterness, of finding a reception by the contending parties of our intervention in favor of Rome."

"But alas," he said, "this so reasonable hope of ours has been disappointed."

The Pontiff mentioned damage done to the Basilica of San Lorenzo, "the veneration of all Catholics by its ancient associations," and "now in very great part destroyed."

The text follows:

"My Dear Lord Cardinal: To you who have such an intimate share in our government and pastoral care of the Diocese of Rome, center and head of the Catholic world and of

Axis Losses Since '40 in African Area Put at 975,000

London, July 21 (INS).—Total Axis losses in the North African-Mediterranean theater between June, 1940, and May, 1943, included 975,000 men killed, wounded or taken prisoner, according to an estimate published today by the Evening Standard on the basis of official communiques.

In addition, 7600 Axis planes were reported destroyed, 624 ships sunk and 6200 guns, 2550 tanks and 70,000 trucks destroyed or sunk since the beginning of the first Egyptian campaign to the end of the North African campaign. Axis losses in Russia were not included.

Nazi Planes Over Sweden Fired On

London, July 21 (INS).—The Stockholm radio was quoted by Reuters news agency late tonight as saying that Swedish warships today fired on two German planes flying over territorial waters of Sweden's west coast. No further details were given immediately.

Kiska Shelled For Sixth Time This Month

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japan's base on Kiska Island in the Aleutians was bombarded by American warships Tuesday for the sixth time this month, the Navy announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, far to the south, Nipponese bombers struck harmlessly at our advance base of Funafuti, Ellice Island, which guards Allied supply lines to the fighting fronts in the Solomons and New Guinea.

Three enemy planes bombed Funafuti, which is about 1500 miles east of Guadalcanal, Tuesday (Monday according to Washington time), but failed to hit anything. There were no casualties and no damage, the Navy reported.

Only two days earlier, the Japs attacked another American outpost in the South Pacific. Canton Island, 750 miles northeast of Funafuti, was raided but no damage was done then, either.

Kiska has been shelled by our war vessels and bombed from the air 23 times this month, indicating that American forces in the North Pacific may be softening it up for an early invasion.

In most of the bombardments, only one United States warship has participated. On Tuesday, two ships, probably light cruisers or destroyers, turned their guns on the main camp area on the island and also on enemy positions on Gertrude Island, believed to be a likely landing place for any American attack.

Japanese shore batteries did not reply to the bombardment, probably so as not to reveal their position.

night paved the way for advancing ground forces by blasting the Randazzo area northwest of Mount Etna, igniting many fires and touching off a violent explosion. American Warhawks maintained the assault by day with ranges throughout the enemy-held part of Sicily.

Indication that Sicilian air defenses were on the point of collapse was given in an official statement that "there was virtually no antiaircraft resistance over the Sicilian city and no night fighters interfered with the operations."

Five enemy planes that attempted to intercept the Yank raiders were shot down. From all day and night operations, six Allied planes failed to return.

War Department Lists 160 Held as Prisoners

The War Department yesterday released names of 160 United States soldiers who are held as prisoners of war by the enemy. A total of 151 men were reported held by Germany and 9 by Italy, none from the Washington area.

War Sidelights

Rome's Bells To Signal Invasion

Bern, July 21 (AP).—The Italian Fifth Army Command, whose headquarters are at Rome, has prepared the Italian populace for a "state of emergency" in the event of an Allied landing within its zone on the Italian mainland, a Swiss telegraphic acency dispatch from Rome reported today.

Notices posted on walls in Rome and elsewhere tell the people that invasion would be signaled by bells, after which they would be compelled to remain day and night in their homes or air raid shelters, the dispatch said.

Guerillas Strike

Cairo, July 21 (AP).—A new wave of guerilla fighting is reported here to have broken out in the Balkans, with patriot fighters taking full advantage of softened Italian morale to strike at occupation troops.

News from Yugoslavia told of severe fighting in Bosnia between Axis troops and guerilla forces of Josip Broz, Montenegrin insurgent also known as "Tito." The latter's band was reported to have taken the offensive and to have captured a number of towns and villages from Axis garrisons.

The renewal of resistance in Yugoslavia was reported to have been closely linked with the invasion of Sicily through close British military liaison with Gen. Draja Mihailovic's guerilla forces.

According to well-substantiated figures released here, nearly 250 Axis supply trains passing over Croatian railroads had been attacked and destroyed since the spring of 1942.

Bombing Pleases Former Rector Of Rome Seminary

Hackensack, N. J., July 21 (AP).—Msgr. Eugene S. Burke, former rector of the American Seminary in Rome, today expressed satisfaction that American aviators had bombed that city, at the same time voicing gratitude that care had been taken to spare nonmilitary structures.

Now pastor of Holy Trinity Church, Hackensack, the monsignor said:

"The Axis may no longer hide behind the walls of the Eternal City. Probably the Pope was sitting in the Vatican thanking God that Rome had at last been bombed. He would realize that while innocents surely would suffer as a result, that it is necessary in order to rid the world of Fascism. It was a military job and a well done one."

Allies Seize Enna, Control Half of Sicily

Ahead of the Allied columns splitting Sicily in half raced airmen strafing the enemy's road of retreat. But the targets were becoming so slim in Sicily for the Allied airmen they were raising their sights generally to attack Sardinia, island above Sicily, and airports on the southern Italian mainland.

Italian prisoners captured in central Sicily also declared that German forces had sped eastward. They complained that the Nazis were deserting them, grabbing all transport and leaving them afoot, but it was likely that the Germans were concentrating their forces in the vital Catania sector.

The Italians also bitterly denounced their own government, saying the Fascists had given them insufficient guns and food to withstand the Allies.

The toll of prisoners apparently was well beyond 35,000, the figure announced two days ago, as the Americans and Canadians quickly reduced Enna which in ancient times held out against the Saraceno for 31 years.

Enna Rich Prize

Enna was a rich prize because it controls the main highway and railroad lines radiating to all corners of the mountainous island. The Americans first had taken Caltanissetta to the southwest, and the Canadians had toppled Piazza Armerina to the southeast. Both towns are 10 to 12 miles from Enna.

Today's official bulletin noted that "French Moroccan troops, the Goums, famous guerilla fighters, have been in action," presumably in the central surge through Sicily.

Of the eastern theater, the communique said: "South of Catania British forces continued to meet strong German resistance, but steady progress is being made and the enemy has suffered very heavy casualties in his efforts to retain his hold on the vital Catania area."

Dispatches from correspondents with the British fleet told of day-long naval bombardments of Catania and German concentrations west of the city. The plain below the city was strewn with Axis dead and wrecked tanks as the British pressed their assaults.

(Rome announced the evacuation of Enna, and Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Berlin radio commentator, said it was in line with an Axis plan of "disengaging movements"—the customary Axis term of retreat.

Ships Pounding Catania

(Berlin broadcasts recorded by the Associated Press also said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery was reinforcing his troops assaulting Catania's defenses, and one "front line" German reporter gave this version of the conflict there:

("Day by day the calm of the sea is rent by broadsides from enemy ships. The houses of the dying city of Catania collapse groaning. Again and again the ruins are hit.

("The important bridge to the southwest, however, has not yet been hit. Four times it has changed hands in the last few days. Montgomery throws in wave upon wave of armor to capture this funnel. . . . but our guns shoot down tank after tank. Between Lentini and Catania alone the wrecks of 80 English tanks litter the countryside.")

Duce's Fault, Bishop Says Of Rome Bombing

Dallas, Tex., July 21 (AP).—The Right Rev. Joseph P. Lynch, member of the papal court and presiding bishop of the North Texas Catholic diocese, today deplored Premier Mussolini's failure to declare Rome an open city.

"He left our air force no alternative," Bishop Lynch said. "There was nothing to do but destroy the military installations that were contributing to the Axis war effort. I can only pray that some thoughtless American or British youth will not deviate from his course and carelessly destroy some landmark of historic importance"

Christian thought and belief, we wish to address ourselves at the moment when our soul is touched with unusual affliction.

"You know well how the sad spectacle of ever greater slaughter and ruin, the unhappy record of this present war being hurled on unarmed and innocent populations, has driven us right from the outset of the conflict to do all we could to prevent the sentiment and laws of humanity from being completely drowned and suffocated by passion in the clash of arms.

"Accordingly in our messages to all the peoples we called upon the belligerents on both sides that if they want to hold the dignity of their country high, and the honor of their arms, they should respect the inviolability of peaceful citizens and monuments of faith and civilization.

"Ponder, we said to them, how severe will be the judgment of future generations on those who have destroyed that part of human progress which should have been jealously guarded as a treasure and glory of all mankind.

"Remember that hate never engendered peace and that resentment occasioned by vast and unnecessary destruction retards the day of peaceful reunion and makes it less certain and less serene.

Calls for Understanding

"A peaceful reunion cannot be got from the humiliation of the conquered but rests and is strengthened only by the feeling of brotherly understanding which draws souls together free of passion and rancor.

"As bishop of this, our city, we have thought with all our heart and you, my lord cardinal, have known of all our efforts that the horrors and destruction of bombing could be spared our dear Rome. Not to mention that the immense historical importance of the ancient City of Rome is that for us it is the the holy city of Catholicism exalted to new and more brilliant glory in the name of Christ.

"It is rich in wonderful religious and artistic monuments, guardian of the most precious documents and relics.

"Rome, whose underground passages in the times of the ruthless persecution were the first sanctuary of the Christian people and of the martyrs who sancitified the amphitheaters and stadia and at whose tombs men gather to pray as at the cradle of Christianity.

"Rome, within whose limits are dispersed departments of the Roman Curia, numerous pontifical institutes and works of international bodies and colleges dependent upon us; furthermore, so many sanctuaries, leaving out of account our glorious patriarchal basilicas, so many libraries and masterpieces of the fine arts by the most famous artists.

"Rome is where men foregather from all parts of the world to learn not only religion but also the faith and wisdom to which men look as to a beacon of civilization founded on Christian virtues.

"But besides this, almost at the center of the city and hence exposed to the dangers of aerial attacks, is our Vatican City, an independent and neutral state which contains immeasurable treasures of religion and art, the sacred heritage not only of the Apostolic See but of the entire Catholic world.

"All that we put before competent authorities on several occasions in clear terms, recommending to them in the name of human dignity and of Christian civilization the inviolability of Rome. We thought ourselves justified in hoping that in the face of such evident reasons the authority with which, however unworthily, we are endowed, the universal recognition of our completely impartial stand above the conflict and of the right and constant charity activity which we have exercised on behalf of all without distinction of nationality or religious belief—that all those considerations would have secured us the consolation among such bitterness of finding a reception by the contending parties of our intervention in favor of Rome. But, alas, this so reasonable hope of ours has been disappointed.

"And now what we apprehended has come to pass. That which in our fears we foresaw is a very sad reality. For one of the most famous Roman basilicas, that of San Lorenzo outside the walls, consecrated to the veneration of all Catholics by its ancient associations and by the venerable tomb of our revered predecessor Pius IX, is now in very great part destroyed. As we contemplated the ruins of that famous temple the words of the Prophet Jeremiah returned to our mind:

"'Quomodo obscuratum est aurum, mutatus est color optimus, dispersi sunt lapides sanctuarii.' (How is the gold become dim, the finest color is changed, the stones of the sanctuary are scattered in the top of every street.)

"The sad reality of experience once again proves that in spite of precautions that men wish to take it is almost impossible to avoid in this holy soil the destruction of the things of the highest values that adorn human and Christian thinking. For it is our fixed intention and our heart's dictate to safeguard and protect before the judgment of posterity the deposit which we have been commissioned to keep.

"Our words which come from a torn heart are not meant as an incentive to vengeance or hate but as an insistent reminder, and we will hope effectively so, to a sense of high minded appreciation of Rome's sacred destiny no less than of Christian community and charity.

"We have striven to bring quick succor by all the means at our disposal to our people of the Roman diocese, so severely tried, whose piteous lot we have been able to behold with our own eyes in the midst of the ruins.

"To them we say, show now as never before the intensity of the proof of that hope for which the Apostle of the Gentiles once wrote to your forefather.

"May Christian resignation make sorrow and privation acceptable to you, may disaster before you serve to purify your soul, to expiate your sins and to return or to draw closer to Our Lord.

"To all our sons whose eyes are turned to Rome and to the Vicar of Christ who as its bishop is its own loving father, to all our sons wherever they be, and in a special way to all those throughout the world whose experience of personal suffering and suffering in others makes them more sympathetic toward every form of misery, we address with fatherly insistence our invitation asking them to raise such good prayers to Our Lord that He may hasten the hour of lightness when men will lay down their arms, their souls will be calm and the lights and joys of a true peace will come back to brighten this convulsed world.

"With this hope in our hearts we impart to you, Lord Cardinal, to our beloved clergy, and the people of Rome the apostolic benediction.

Bishop Assails Raid

St. Augustine, Fla., July 21 (AP).—The Most Rev. Joseph P. Hurley, Bishop of St. Augustine and formerly attached to the Vatican as aide to the Papal Secretary of State, declared today that "every decent Christian thought and sentiment within me cries out that we have made a tragically mistaken decision" in the bombing of Rome.

Bishop Hurley now at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., issued his statement through the chancery here.

"The news of the bombing of Rome—by our own soldiers—has pained me beyond expression," he said. "I realize very well that the Fascist government of Italy has sought with craven cunning to protect some of its military activities by carrying them on within the shadow of the sacred shrines of Christendom. I appreciate, too, the meticulous care with which our airmen endeavored, though vainly, to avoid hitting churches and historic monuments in the Eternal City. But every decent Christian thought and sentiment within me cries out that we have made a tragically mistaken decision in the higher moral strategy of this just war.

"I am convinced, too, that the raid on Rome has darkened our prospects for the sort of peace so ardently desired by all of us. . . .

"Whatever the professionals of war may say about 'military necessity' good men the world over will earnestly pray that the Eternal City be spared further air raids. Such raids would only serve to imperil our hopes for a future of Christian peace . . .

". . . Let Washington not be deceived by the obscene chorus of approval which is registered in the regimented press. Our Government will show wisdom and virtue if with sincere contrition it addresses itself at once to rebuilding these ruins . . ."

down 11 more at a cost of only 2 of our planes. The pilot of one of these two was reported safe.

There were no details of the fighting in the steaming jungles of the Bairoko-Munda sector. The communique said merely that "enemy ground forces launched a strong counterattack and were repulsed with heavy losses."

At the other end of the 700-mile battlefront, sharp fighting was reported in the heavily wooded hills along the Komiatum track south of Salamaua, one of the Japanese bases on the coast of New Guinea.

Allied bombers were busy all along the New Guinea coast from Salamaua to Madang, about 300 miles up the coast.

Gangs Make Park Dangerous Place

The third of five stories on juvenile gangs.

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

". . . Another squad (police) siezed five white youths in and around Franklin Park in connection with recent robberies in that area—" The Washington Post, July 14, 1943.

Furtive shadows scurried across from the park and up the alley behind Almas Temple.

Agonized groans were heard and firemen from No. 16 Station rushed out and down the alley, their flashlights picking up the recumbent figures of an old man being kicked in the face by crouching figures who faded at once into the shadows.

The old man—61 years old, the firemen said yesterday—was hastily given first aid and the blood was washed from his swollen features. His pockets were turned out—he had been picked clean. He was sent to Emergency Hospital.

The werewolves again had bared their fangs . . . It was but another incident to a long list of depredations laid to the door of the Franklin Park Gang.

Sinister Spot at Night

The gangs begin to assemble at dusk. Franklin Park is a pleasant place in a busy section of the Nation's Capital by day; but if you take it from the men of Sixteen Engine Company and Three Truck Company nearby, it is something to shun by night.

There are at least 20 of these young toughs—girls and boys.

Their ages range from 12 to 17—surely not older. A reporter walked in Franklin Park one night recently. Near the corner of Thirteenth and K Streets they were sprawled, paired off—and, oblivious of their surroundings.

Another couple joined the group. He was not more than 16. Even with the rouge she did not appear more than 13.

The pattern is rather consistent.

First they go to an adjacent cafe. Out in front or down the alley which it borders they have a transaction—apparently buying marijuana from a man in a brown suit. Firemen believe they do not, as a rule, drink liquor.

They Work Together

They cross the street, almost invariably, from Franklin School to the park. They know each other well. They work together. They belong to the same mob.

The Franklin Park gang members stay late, not infrequently all night. They may be found leaving or coming to their rendezvous at any hour after dusk. And leaving at any hour before dawn.

But around midnight they fan out from the park in varied directions—down alleys and bystreets, sometimes in pairs, often a half-dozen at a time deployed for a block on either side of a street . . .

From The Post, July 11:

". . . Shortly before 3 a. m., Carl Woodward of 1221 K Street Northwest was bludgeoned by two teen-age boys in the park at Twelfth Street and New York Avenue. They took $55 and escaped on foot."

Occasionally, a lone sailor or soldier may be seen asleep on a bench in Franklin Park. . . .

Again from The Post, July 11:

". . . The fourth victim was Chandler Law, private first class, attached to Walter Reed Hospital. Three white men assaulted him at Thirteenth and I Streets Northwest, and stole $2 from him."

Kid Gangsters

The soldier told firemen later that it was kid gangsters who attacked him, according to Lieut. Paul Stafford of No. 16 Fire Station.

"These kids are tough," Stafford said. "They carry knives and blackjacks. I've seen lots of them—and the girls, who are very young, they are just as hard as their boy friends."

A few years before the war, most of the families to which these werewolves belong, according to the lieutenant, were underprivileged. But came Pearl Harbor and everybody got jobs—or divorces. Or the family divided.

Boys and girls were left to shift for themselves. The result of broken homes, no matter how poverty-stricken they had been, is coming to light. Hemp-smoking hijackers and prostitutes . . . full-blown hoodlums despite their rationed years.

Italian Prisoners Head for Camp

D. C. Sailor Tells of 3 Days On SicilyBeach

Armed with a pistol which was jammed by sand and salt water, and his camera, Chief Photographer's Mate Bill Forsythe of the Coast Guard, formerly a Washington newspaper photographer and employe of the Department of Agriculture, landed on the mine strewn beach of Gela, Sicily, July 10, with American combat engineers.

FORSYTHE

Not knowing the beach was mined, he ran across the sands with his water-soaked clothing cutting his speed as he gripped his precious camera, he related in an eyewitness account of the landing operations released by the Coast Guard yesterday.

Intense enemy fire spurred his speed however, and he dug-in in a foxhole without injury.

By dawn he had made his way to some fishermen's shacks under fire of snipers as United States Rangers began bringing in prisoners.

Later he traded some sugar for a pair of dry socks with a native. German tanks attacked Gela while he was inside the town but they were stopped by guns of American ships.

Going back to his ship he again became soaked and he then related the story of weary sailors standing guard and snatching a few winks of sleep as they could, without leaving their posts.

Sunday he spent aboard the ship with Italian and German planes dropping bombs all around her. Another sleepless night was experienced on Sunday when all hands were busy repairing equipment and unloading supplies. Monday, his last day off Sicily, they again were bombed and strafed by a Messerschmitt and he saw the German plane shot down by a Spitfire.

And, so he said, ended his three-day stay at the invasion beach.

Chinese Tells Naval Section Story of 131 Days on Raft

By M. Margaret Davis
Post Staff Writer

The son of "the strongest man on the Island of Hainan" came to Washington yesterday to tell his fish story to the Emergency Rescue Equipment Section of the Office of the Coordinator of Research and Development of the United States Navy.

He was Poon Lim, 25-year-old Chinese mess steward, who survived 131 days adrift on a raft in the South Atlantic, living on fish and sometimes birds after rations ran out, and who came to the United States of his own accord after spending a month and a half in a Brazilian hospital.

A British merchant seaman for nine years, Poon Lim whose freighter was torpedoed off the coast of Africa in November, 1942, has been invited to receive the British Empire Medal, highest civilian decoration for valor, from King George VI.

Just now, however, he is in the United States as a private citizen and says he wants to stay here always. So far, the United States, for him, has been Miami, New York, and Washington. But it is the people of this country that he likes. "People are so kind," he said yesterday through his interpreter, pretty lecturer, writer, and actress, Li Ling Ai, who accompanied him here from New York. "They don't have to bother, but they bother."

Li Ling retold the story of Poon Lim's trip to reporters.

After land was sighted, hope came the first time when planes circled over him and dropped flares. But rescue did not come until Portuguese fishermen picked him up off the coast of Brazil.

Now, Poon Lim would like news of his wife whom he left on the Island of Hainan, his brother with the Chinese Expeditionary Forces in Calcutta, and any other survivors of the torpedoed British freighter. Poon Lim's parents are not living, but his father, he recalls, was known as the strongest man on the Island of Hainan.

Mrs. Linzel Takes Position As Civilian Services Deputy

Mrs. Verna D. Linzel has resigned her position with the Board of Public Welfare to accept the post of deputy to Executive Officer Harry P. Somerville of Civilian War Services.

Mrs. Linzel, will receive $3800 a year. Her appointment was at the suggestion of Somerville, who pointed out that plans originally approved by the Commissioners suggested appointing an administrative assistant at $2100 a year and a stenographer at $1800. Since the stenographic job is being paid for with regular District appropriated funds, Somerville suggested combining the two salaries and appointing a deputy executive officer.

Mrs. Linzel, has been identified with women's organizations and public service for many years. In April 1941, she succeeded Daniel W. O'Donoghue, jr., as a member of the Board of Public Welfare. At that time she was serving as chairman of the family service division of the Council of Social Agencies.

In July 1942, she became regional representative of civilian defense for the District, later served as child care consultant for the Third Civilian Defense region, and last spring was loaned by national OCD to assist in reorganizing local Civilian War Services.

Defense Rests Its Spud Price Violation Case

The defense rested its case late yesterday in the Municipal Court trial of Henry Sherman of 1427 Morse Street Northeast, who is accused of selling 1025 pounds of potatoes at above the OPA ceiling on May 21, when the spud shortage in the District was at its peak.

Sheman specifically is accused of five OPA violations in the sale of the 1025 pounds at 7½ cents a pound when the ceiling price was 5½ cents a pound.

Says His Wife Was Retailer

Sherman testified that he had brought 20,000 pounds of potatoes here from South Carolina which were sold at the store of his wife, Dora Sherman, at 1364 C Street Southeast. He contends, however, that while the potatoes were sold at the alleged above-ceiling prices, he merely acted as a wholesaler while his wife was the retailer.

The profit on the entire transaction, testimony showed, was $680, while the OPA charges he should not have taken more than $268 as a profit. Regardless, said Defense Attorney J. E. Bindeman, Sherman acted only as a middleman and therefore could not be guilty of the offense charged.

OPA Assent Claimed

Sherman further testified that the potatoes were sold at the high price only after his wife had consulted William C. Stanton, National OPA official, and local OPA investigators who, he said, had advised her that she was justified in charging the higher price. This, the investigators deny.

The case is expected to reach the jury late today. Prosecuting the case is Assistant U. S. Attorney Cecil Heflin assisted by John Laskey, chief attorney for the District OPA. Presiding is Judge Walter Casey.

Zoo Boasts Three Sets of New Babies

Activity at the Washington Zoo has been rather brisk the last few days, it was learned yesterday.

Things began happening last week with the birth of four mountain lions. They will remain in solitude and darkness for a few more days, it was said, before going on exhibition. Then four or five babies were born to the coatimondi, cousins to the raccoon. They, too, will spend the next week or so in seclusion getting used to things.

Finally the white tufted marmoset couple came along with twins, which were on view yesterday but, getting down to it, only to the patient and microscopic eye. Both babies were glued to the mother's sides; while the father, a skittish fellow, was off in a corner doing away with a bit of bread.

Dr. William Mann, director of the Zoo, made it clear that never before have marmosets given birth in his zoo. And in other zoos, he said, it is certainly not an everyday occurrence. The new ones will be recorded as cullithrex jacchus, habitat southeastern Brazil.

Couple Indicted In Grand Jury's Coal Field Probe

Pittsburgh, July 21 (AP).—A Federal Grand Jury served stern warning today by indicting a miner and his wife that it will "tolerate no interference" in its investigation into recent work stoppages in the soft coal fields.

John Andrew Soltis, alias John A. Saltus, and Mrs. Florence Soltis, alias Mrs. Florence Saltus, were charged with attempting to intimidate Kenneth Harvey of Hiller, Fayette County, by threatening to shoot him.

It also was charged Harvey had been placed "in fear of bodily harm by divers other threats and opprobrious names" while he still was "subject to subpoena for further appearance" before the grand jury.

D. C. Officer Wins Navy's Merit Award

Comdr. John F. Greenslade, 39, of 4914 Glenbrook Road Northwest, son of Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, commander of the Twelfth Naval District, has been given the Legion of Merit award for outstanding services on the staff of a commander aircraft, South Pacific Force, the Navy announced yesterday.

His citation reads, in part:

"Frequently extending his activities into hazardous combat areas, he participated in numerous reconnaissance flights over hostile territory with complete disregard for his own personnal safety. His courageous initiative and resolute determination contributed materially to the devastating raids launched by Allied air forces."

His wife, Mrs. Rosemary Greenslade, lives at the address.

At the same time the Navy announced that the Cross of Boyaca, highest decoration given by the Colombian government, had been awarded to Capt. James Richard Barry, who is on duty in the Office of Chief of Naval Operations here. The award was made in recognition of the work done by Captain Barry while chief of the United States Naval Mission to Colombia.

Captain Barry, who is now on temporary duty in the Office of Chief of Naval Operations at the Navy Department, is a Washington native. Currently he and Mrs. Barry reside with his brother-in-law and wife, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Wilder D. Baker, at 1868 Columbia Road Northwest. A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1909, he has received other decorations, including the Mexican Service Medal, Victory Medal for World War service, and the Chevalier of SS. Maurice and Lazaras by the government of Italy.

Stepin Fetchit Is Sentenced To 30 Days on Girl's Charge

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 21.—Lincoln A. (Stepin Fetchit) Perry, Negro comedian, was sentenced today to 30 days in the House of Correction on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Judge Joseph B. Hermes of Jury Court, who convicted Perry after trial without a jury, stayed execution of sentence for 60 days, pending an appeal.

The Negro girl in the case, Juanita Randolph, 16, who was found by a policeman in Perry's hotel roo mJuly 8, last week was sentenced to six months for contempt of court after she told contradictory stories, but today Judge Hermes lifted that sentence, holding she had been punished enough.

Perry testified the girl came to the theater where he was appearing, representing herself as a newspaper reporter, and on the night of July 7 came to his hotel room, while he was with friends, "just to say goodnight." He said after she had gone he noticed his room key was gone, too.

Perry said he did not know the girl was in his room early next morning when Policeman Lawrence Sauser arrived. Sauser testified the girl came out of the bathroom, wearing Perry's pajamas, and that Perry said: "Now, girl, how did you get in my room?"

SPECIAL NOTICE

After having served the people of Washington for over half a century, we announce our retirement from the furniture business—we hope for the duration only. This decision was the result of our inability to secure the quality and variety of fine furniture, for which we have been noted.

In order to carry out this decision as readily as possible, we have sold our entire stock to Mayer & Company of this city. This arrangement in no way affects pieces already sold or on order for customers, or the completion of jobs now in our shop. Also, for the time being, all payments can be made at 1108 G Street Northwest.

We look forward to the time when we can again renew the many pleasant business relationships which we have enjoyed for so many years.

★ CONTEST OPEN ONLY TO THOSE LIVING WITHIN A RADIUS OF 25 MILES OF THE CAPITOL
★ CONTEST OPENS TODAY . . . CONTEST CLOSES THURSDAY JULY 29th AT MIDNIGHT
★ WINNERS WILL BE ANNOUNCED AND PRIZES AWARDED ON MONDAY AUGUST 9th

The Editors of "READ" Magazine Will Pay

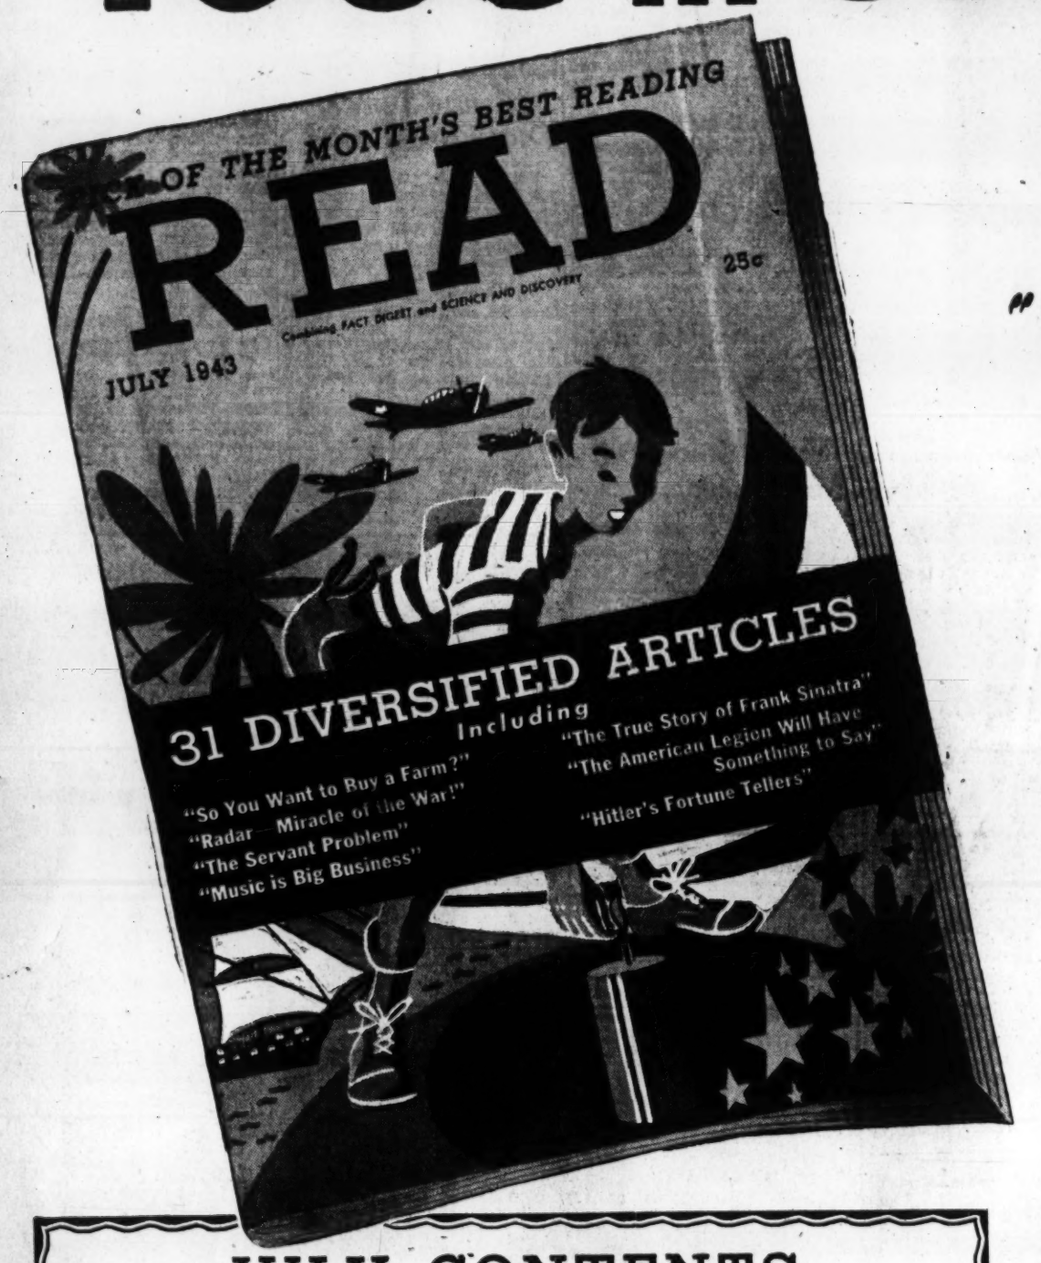
$1500 in CASH PRIZES

FOR THE 100 BEST LETTERS (OF NOT MORE THAN 100 WORDS) EXPRESSING

"My frank opinion of the July issue of 'Read'!"



HERE IS A QUICK, EASY CONTEST FOR EVERYBODY

Every entrant has as good a chance as the next one. It may be your suggestions . . . your criticism . . . your praise . . . your opinion which may win the $500 First Prize or one of the other 99 cash prizes.

The rules are simple. Just write a letter of not more than 100 words about "READ" magazine (subject to the rules) . . . MAIL IT WITHIN ONE WEEK (contest closes Midnight, Thursday, July 29th) . . . the winners will be announced and the awards paid Monday, August 9th. America's largest Contest-Judging organization The Reuben F. Donnelly Company will be the sole judge. Their decision will be final.

You can PRAISE "READ" . . . you can CRITICIZE "READ" . . . you can combine praise with criticism . . . you can write about the magazine as a whole . . . the articles or the authors, individually or collectively. In fact, you write whatever you think. And that's exactly the point. The editors of this timely publication would like to know the "READ"er's re-action to the July issue of "READ". They want the "READ"er's opinion, because "READ" has no axe to grind, except to enrich the lives of its "READ"ers!

Washington likes "READ"! Many newsstands were sold out in a short time—and had to be quickly re-plenished. Most newsstands can now again supply you with copies of "READ".

AND NOW . . . The Editors of "READ" Want To Know What You and Others Who Have Bought "Read" Think of This Magazine.

To stimulate your interest . . . to make it worth your while to write to them, they present this simple, easy-to-enter contest—with Cash Prizes large enough and numerous enough to tempt everyone.

Perhaps you have already bought a copy of "READ" from your newsdealer . . . or have borrowed a copy from a friend—or have read it in the public library. You don't have to purchase READ to enter this contest.

All you have to do is write a letter . . . not over 100 words . . . long hand or typed . . . (neatness won't count)—just a simple letter, written just as you would tell it to a friend . . .

The Prizes

TOTAL . . .	$1500.00

THE RULES
Governing This Contest

1. This contest is open only to persons living within a radius of 25 miles of the Capitol.
2. Contest opens July 22nd, 1943. Contest ends at Midnight, Thursday, July 29th. Winners will be announced and prizes awarded August 9th, 1943.
3. "READ" will award a First Prize of $500 cash and 99 other cash prizes, a grand total of $1,500 for the 100 best letters of not more than 100 words expressing "MY FRANK OPINION OF THE JULY ISSUE OF "READ". Reuben F. Donnelly, nationally famous contest judging organization, will judge all letters and determine the winners. Their decision shall be final.
4. Letters must be postmarked not later than Midnight, Thursday, July 29th, 1943.
5. It is not necessary to buy "READ" in order to enter the contest. A copy may be examined free at the Public Library.
6. Neatness will not count. Do not attempt to decorate your letter. Letters will be judged on the basis of sincerity, constructive advice, general interest and originality of thought. In case of ties duplicate prizes will be awarded.
7. Entries should be addressed to, Contest Editor, "Read", 1780 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y.

Two Red Armies Drive on Fringes of Orel

2342 planes and more than 75,000 dead.

The Russian radio in a separate dispatch also recorded by the Soviet monitor here said Soviet bombers had concentrated on German-held railway junctions and airfields Wednesday night, blasting Orel, Lozovaya, Kramatorskaya, Karachev and Khartuk.

Large fires were observed and a number of German planes were destroyed. Four Soviet planes failed to return.

The midnight communique said the Germans were hastily throwing into the line their reserves of infantry and tanks as soon as they arrived. Fighting was described as fierce.

A large number of German soldiers were reported to have been jailed at Bryansk for refusing to fight, the communique said.

Some military observers, noting the speed of the Russian advance from north of Orel, guessed that the Red Army had cut the Bryansk-Orel Railway which for days has been under effective command of their cannon.

Nazis at a Loss for Words

The Germans were hard-pressed to hit upon a satisfactory propaganda line to account for the Russian gains.

Captain Ludwig Sertorius, a leading commentator for Berlin, said in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.

"The large-scale Russian offensive is in full swing. Even if the enemy would like to stop it, he no longer would be able to do so. He has thrown in far too large forces and his shock troops are already too deeply engaged in battle. This battle, acording to plans of the German high command, is intended to wear out Russian offensive strength."

The capture of Buky was announced by Moscow last night and this posed a double threat to Orel and Bryansk. Reuters said the Red army had reached Ermolaeva, less than 7 miles east of Orel, which was under siege from the north, south and east.

Ancient Saracens Took 31 Years To Capture Enna

Enna, now taken by Americans and Canadians, was called by ancients "The Navel of Sicily," because it is in the exact center of the island, says the National Geographic Society. It occupies the flat top of a mountain 3200 feet high, surrounded on all sides by steep cliffs.

Every conqueror of Sicily has realized the necessity for taking Enna, and often it was the last point to fall. The Saracens, who conquered empires in a day, laid siege to Enna for 31 years before it fell. When it came the Normans' turn, Enna held out for a quarter century. During ancient wars the mountaintop fortress never fell to direct attack or siege, but it changed hands often by treachery and betrayal.

Axis Prisoners Interned in U. S. Now Total 65,058

Axis prisoners of war interned in the United States now total 65,058, with many more scheduled to be shipped here in the near future, the War Department announced yesterday.

An Army statement revealed that permanent prison camps in this country will accommodate 139,164 enemy captives, and said that in order to accommodate more of the 267,000 Germans and Italians captured in North Africa, additional camps are to be built and existing ones will be expanded.

Thirty-seven prison camps located in 20 States now house 45,355 Germans, 19,641 Italians and 62 Japs. One of the camps is at Fort Meade, Md.

Chinese Troops Raid Jap Isle

Chungking, July 21 (AP).—Chinese troops made a successful raid on the Japanese-occupied island of Huangkua off the Fukien coast some 60 miles south of Foochow, killing many enemy troops, taking several prisoners and capturing a boatload of supplies, a high command communique announced today.

In Chekiang Province Japanese troops attacking Chinese positions southeast of Linghu were repulsed and lost a large quantity of military supplies, it added.

Germans Act

Manifesto Asks Revolt Of Nazi Army

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 21.—A manifesto published here today said that a group of German refugees and prisoners of war in Russia have banded together into "the national committee for a free Germany," and have urged the German people and the Nazi army to revolt and halt the war "before it's too late."

The committee called for abolition of all Hitler laws and the establishment of a democracy. The 33 Germans who signed the manifesto said they are convinced that the war is lost.

Other points demanded by the manifesto were the reestablishment and widening of the political rights and social gains of the working people; freedom of speech, the press, conscience and religion, and freedom to acquire property lawfully. It also demanded the return of confiscated property to its lawful owners, and the confiscation of the property of those who are to blame for starting the war.

The manifesto proposed the "awful and unmerciful trial of those responsible for the war," but at the same time urged an amnesty for those of Hitler's followers who "denounce him and join the movement for a free Germany."

The manifesto concluded with an appeal for action to insure the gaining of an "immediate peace."

will never have a repetition of the situation as it exists today." He added that the powers of the agency should be more clearly defined.

While he said that he did not believe the FCC should operate either the FBI's or its radio intelligence division, he said he had agreed early in the war that the FCC should properly put its radio direction finding and monitoring equipment to work in the emergency.

He said that in doing so, he had been under the impression that the military "asked us to help." Later he heard rumors that the joint Chiefs of Staff had recommended that the FCC's military intelligence operations be transferred to military control—a proposal disclosed by Garey two weeks ago in the committee's first session. After hearing the rumors, said Craven, he asked about them in a commission meeting, and was assured by Chairman Fly that "there was nothing to it."

Proposal a Surprise

As a result, he said, the proposal of the joint Chiefs of Staff was a surprise to him. He said he thought "something constructive" could be done along the line of the proposed transfer.

"I think the FCC should remain in the civilian field and the military should remain in the military field," he said.

Craven charged that in its judicial processes the FCC organization is "very unsound and should be changed." He said that the action several years ago of the FCC in dismissing its general counsel, Hampson Gary, was "outrageously wrong."

Committee Counsel Garey asked whether Gary had been dismissed "because he was unwilling to lend his intellect and integrity to the purposes the commission wished to have served?"

"That is correct in my opinion," said Craven.

Garey read a memorandum prepared by Craven in 1938 containing half a dozen policy resolutions, including a demand that each member be left free to vote according to his judgment and the law without pressure from the chairman, and that all parts of the agency and its employes should be under the administrative jurisdiction of the 7-member commission, rather than only the chairman. Crave nsaid all the proposals had been formally tabled.

Craven, who was appointed a commissioner after serving as chief FCC engineer, said that on one occasion former FCC Chairman Frank R. McNinch had proposed that "he would go along with me on engineering matters if I would in effect give him my proxy on policy matters."

Craven said his answer was "no," and that in fairness the present chairman had never demanded that he change his vote.

Japs Raise Sunken British Drydock

By the Associated Press

A Domei dispatch from Shanghai, broadcast by the Tokyo radio, said yesterday that Japanese naval salvaging experts have succeeded in raising the King George VI floating dock, said to be the world's largest, in Singapore harbor.

Terming it "one of the greatest salvaging feats in history," Domei said the giant dock was raised in three months from the time work was undertaken last May. The dock could accommodate ships up to 50,000 tons.

Television for All Promised With End of War

By the Associated Press

New York, July 21.—Television—called by scientists the "flesh and blood of sight and sound"—will be ready for every family's use "immediately after the war," Ralph R. Beal, research director for the Radio Corporation of America, said without reservation today.

Home receiving sets in any desired size with "screens" from 6 to 24 inches in width will be available to purchasers, Beal said, "within the shortest space of time required to reconvert the radio manufacturing industry from war to peace production."

He made it clear, however, that he thought there was room for both sound broadcasting and television, just as the telegraph and the telephone have pursued parallel successes in common usage.

Cheap Enough For All

"Unquestionably, television receiving sets will be within the range of the average pocketbook," Beal said, "and we expect to be able to do a good job of programming without too many awkward growing pains."

Beal's remarks were the first flat statements from a cautious scientist concerning the imminent Nation-wide launching of the new commercial entertainment industry, which has been disputed pro and con for a decade.

"Years of research—speeded and implemented by wartime discoveries and emergency developments, have paved the way to smooth and highly practical television operation," Beal declared.

Better Entertainment

"I believe that in applying all of our new findings to a fresh industry, television will provide a much more satisfactory entertainment medium than has ever been achieved down through the centuries. The effectiveness of sight added to sound is four times greater than sound alone."

Beal said a network of automatic monitor stations will be employed to relay television's images and sound from a central transmitting tower to any desired distance. Thus a planned relay from New York to Washington could be extended to any part of the country.

U. S. Indians Now in Midst Of Ritual Dance

Fort Hall, Idaho, July 21 (AP).—Indian dancers, nude to the waist, their bodies streaked with brilliantly hued paint, stand silent, their eyes turned to the east.

As the sun slowly ascends, tomtoms begin to throb and the redmen fling their arms upward in long sweeping motions. They're "waving up" the sun.

That is the symbolic dawn ceremony of the annual sun dance by Bannack and Shoshone Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation—a rigorous ritual, begun at sundown last night, which continues through today and tomorrow.

Bridge in Burma Blasted

New Delhi, July 21 (AP).—Heavy and medium bombers of the United States Tenth Air Force yesterday heavily attacked the Myitnge Railway bridge on the important Japanese-held Mandalay-Rangoon rail line in south central Burma, a United States headquarters communique said today. Almost 30 tons of bombs were dropped in the bridge area during the concentrated attack. No planes were lost.

Sen. Taft Proposes Sales Tax Program

10% Retail Levy Rebatable After War Suggested by Ohioan as Compromise

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A 10 per cent stamp tax on retail sales, convertible into war bonds and rebatable after the war, yesterday was suggested by Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio as a possible basis of sales tax compromise.

In Washington to "study up" on taxes, in advance of Finance Committee action this fall, Taft called the retail stamp purchase plan a politically feasible middle course between a general sales levy and forced loans.

The Ohio Republican said he opposed forced loans as such, because the Government probably can raise more by voluntary methods, and because compulsory savings present intrinsically the same problems as a tax, without having the same revenue merits.

Veto Feared on Sales Tax

The general sales tax as an alternative, he said, would almost certainly run into Administration opposition and probably a veto. If it were passed over a veto, he said, it was likely to be injected as a "demogogic" issue into the next campaign.

As between the two, he said he thought the stamp purchase plan, originally advanced last year by Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut might well become a favored basis of compromise between Congress and the Administration.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, meanwhile, in a letter to Col. Franklin D'Olier, New Jersey War Finance chairman, said "there is no indication that it will be necessary or wise" to adopt a system of forced savings. He said serious discussion of compulsory savings should be postponed "until we are faced with some need to make a decision."

Morgenthau wrote that the present voluntary method "has the great virture of being flexible enough to permit bond buyers to continue meeting vital commitments for life insurance, mortgage paymetns and other noninflationary investments." He said "one of the great weaknesses of a compulsory savings plan is its lack of such flexibility."

Forced Loan Discussion

D'Olier, president of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., had said that continued discussion of forced loans "is bound to react unfavorably" on the September and December war loan drives.

Taft expressed much the same opposition to forced savings as Morgenthau. The difficulty, said the Senator, was in finding and applying a uniform rule that would skim excess purchasing power without hardships in individual cases. If such a rule was found, he suggested, then the Government would have answered its tax problem without resort to compulsory savings.

Taft thought, however, that the Danaher stamp proposal might be a practicable substitute for either compulsory savings or a general sales tax.

Briefly, the Danaher plan, estimated to raise more than five billion dollars annually, would require individuals to buy a stamp with every retail purchase, equal to 10 per cent of the sale. The stamps would be turned in for nonnegotiable, noninterest-bearing war bonds, which in turn could be used either to pay taxes or be refunded to individuals after the war.

Taft Not Ready to Talk

Asked if he thought Congress would raise the full 12 billion in additional taxes sought by the Administration, and if so, how it might be raised, Taft said he was not ready to discuss either tax "amounts" or a detailed program until he had had more time for study.

Chennault's Son Helena Survivor

Waterproof, La., July 21 (AP).—D. W. Chennault, who was revealed today in Pacific dispatches as one of the survivors of the light cruiser U. S. S. Helena rescued from a Japanese-held island, is the fifth son of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the United States Fourteenth Air Force in China.

D. W. Chennault is 20 years old and enlisted in the Navy in December, 1941. General Chennault has three other sons in the Army and two in Government work. Mrs. Chennault, mother of eight children, expressed relief when informed of the safety of her son.

Air Traffic Control Plans Laid Here

Plans to institute air traffic control systems in two years for the Washington and New York areas will be discussed today at the Civil Aeronautics Administration's annual conference in Chicago.

Airplane traffic over Washington at present is controlled from an electric posting board in the airway traffic control center at the National Airport. It is the only one of its kind in the country, according to a CAA official.

While this equipment will serve adequately for the next two years, the official said, plans must now be drawn up to replace it and to supply prospectively busy air centers throughout the country with similar equipment.

Washington and New York will be the first to receive such equipment by 1945, and Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Los Angeles and Oakland will be equipped by 1946, it was estimated.

The airways over the Capital are devoted these days to military and airline plane traffic. After the war, commercial and civilian use of airplanes is expected to increase to such an extent as to require regular traffic control, much as crowded automobile traffic is regulated, the official declared.

Bert Fish, 67, Dies in Lisbon

By the Associated Press

Lisbon, July 21.—Bert Fish, 67, United States Minister to Portugal, died today after an illness of two weeks.

He presented his credentials to President Carmona on March 26, 1941. He came to Lisbon from Cairo, where he had served for eight years. During part of his service in Cairo he was minister to Saudi Arabia, as well as to Egypt.

He was born October 8, 1875, in Bedford, Ind., and was educated at John B. Stetson University, Florida. He was admitted to the Florida bar in 1902 and practiced at Deland, Fla. He retired at the end of 1926.

He was chairman of the delegation to the capitulations conference held in April and May, 1937, in Montreaux, Switzerland.

Girl Orchestra To Entertain At Hospital Dance

The regular semiweekly dance for patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital tonight will be held to the music of Freddie Shaffer and his Victory Sweethearts, an all-girl orchestra.

The "Sweethearts," who have been entertaining nightly at the Uline Arena and were one of the most popular shows on USO Army circuits throughout the West and Midwest, volunteered to contribute their services to the occasion.

It will be the first opportunity these patients have had for full orchestral dance entertainment. A juke box has provided the music in the past.

Salt to Big Game Dropped From Plane

Helena, Mont. (AP).—The annual task of distributing salt to Montana big game herds is being done this year by airplane. The job takes two or three weeks if packhorses are used; only a few hours by plane. The salt, in large blocks, is dropped in the wild, mountainous grazing lands from low flying ships.

LADY, we're just as sorry as we can be. Now, as always, we would do anything in our power to make your train trip comfortable.

Now, as always, we'd like to provide a seat for everybody—but war comes first.

The R. F. & P. RAILROAD today carries 80% more passengers than last year, and nearly 5 times the traffic carried in 1940 just before the war.

Furlough travel at times is so heavy that we find it necessary to discontinue the sale of tickets for some trains. Often even standing room is not available.

Every patriotic American is urged to be SURE his trip is necessary before he buys a ticket. Please do not make non-essential trips, but if you MUST go, travel if possible on Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday; limit your hand-baggage to actual requirements, other baggage can be checked; and if your plans are changed, cancel your reservations promptly.

This railroad, like all railroads, wants you to enjoy Travel by Train. But, as every patriotic American knows, war comes first in wartime.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Corcoran Engineered Job for Leo Crowley

FINAL DECISION TO oust both Jesse Jones and Wallace from any connection with Economic Warfare, replacing them with Leo Crowley, was attended by much inner White House debate and personnel juggling. It showed significantly how the President's new crop of advisers line up.

The solution first proposed by former Justice Jimmy Byrnes was to make Wallace's director, Milo Perkins, an Assistant Secretary of State under Cordell Hull. This would have kept Perkins, an able administrator thoroughly familiar with Economic Warfare, but put him back under the State Department, where Economic Warfare was originally.

Two years ago Secretary Hull got his Tennessee dander up when this job was transferred away from his slow-paced diplomats and he has never stopped pulling wires to get it back.

Not many people know it, but in the end, it was Tom Corcoran who, in the present imbroglio, swung the Economic Warfare job away from Hull to Leo Crowley.

The young brain-truster, formerly the President's closest adviser, had been euchered out of his White House intimacy by Harry Hopkins. So this was a real triumph.

Hopkins, now closest to the President, spiked Corcoran long ago; but Tommy still has a powerful friend in Justice Byrnes, also in Ben Cohen and Leo Crowley. Thus, indirectly, Corcoran was able to convince the White House that Economic Warfare should not go back to the State Department, where it had sagged woefully, but should get fresh, new blood through Crowley.

NOTE: Whether it can get that fresh blood through Crowley remains to be seen. An A-1 executive, Crowley is already overburdened with Federal Deposit Insurance and Alien Property Custodian. He had done a good job, but so did Jesse Jones before he took on too many responsibilities.

Final line-up of the White House inner circle on the basic question of ousting Henry Wallace was a split vote—3 to 2.

Harry Hopkins, Judge Sam Rosenman and Byrnes all voted against the Vice President. Hopkins has always been against Wallace, has made catty remarks about him for years, started some time ago to euchre him out of renomination if FDR runs for a fourth term. Also Harry is a poker-playing intimate of Jesse Jones.

Siding with Wallace were Budget Director Harold Smith and his chief aide, Wayne Coy. Smith, a Republican, together with Coy, maintained that Wallace and Perkins had done an excellent administrative job. Their BEW was the only new Government agency not to have its appropriations cut by Congress, had recouped U. S. war materials abroad after about half of them were corralled by the Japs. And, according to the budget directors, BEW did not deserve to be penalized.

In the end, FDR himself decided to oust Wallace. The Vice President had submitted a memo to the White House two weeks before, telling of recent Jesse Jones delays in the purchase of strategic materials. These were not delays of 18 months ago, as stated in the President's letter, but instances of the past few days and weeks where war materials were held up despite the constant importuning of Wallace and Perkins.

After this memo had been on the President's desk for two weeks with no action, Wallace finally opened up his public blast.

He told the President in advance that he was going to make a statement, but either Roosevelt did not appreciate how strong the statement was going to be, or else Wallace got his dander up and warmed to the writing afterwards.

At any rate, the blast caught the President off base and he was irked.

Judge Vinson Performs

White House adviser who did the most efficient job for the President during the Jones-Wallace row was hard-hitting Judge Fred Vinson. He was the man who stopped the congressional investigation of the dispute. Because the President had okayed four letters authorizing Jesse Jones to hold up rubber, aluminum and other strategic materials, a congressional investigation was the last thing the Administration wanted. It would have shown that the President had acted hastily, to say the least, in signing Jones's memos.

So on the day the House Rules Committee was to vote on an investigation of the Jones-Wallace row, smart Fred Vinson went up on Capitol Hill and got his successor in Congress appointed to the Rules Committee

When Vinson resigned from Congress in 1937 to become a court of appeals judge, he helped elect Kentucky's erudite Joseph B. Bates to the vacancy. So with the Rules Committee deadlocked over whether or not to investigate Jones and Wallace, Vinson got Bates appointed, and Bates broke the Rules Committee tie.

Social Security

Sir William Beveridge, author of the famous Beveridge plan for increased social security in England, gave a most enlightening address in Washington recently, but later proved unable to "take it" at a reception at the home of Pennsylvania's former Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

At the reception, Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell, who made the Navy take back its Elk Hills deal with Standard Oil of California, remarked:

"I understand, Sir William, that the Scandinavian countries really pioneered in social security."

"Not at all," replied the author of the Beveridge plan. "What they did amounted to very little. New Zealand was the real pioneer."

"Have you been to the Scandinavian countries?" asked Littell.

"No, I haven't."

"Well, I understand that social security was like the Bill of Rights to them."

"Not at all, not at all," replied Beveridge, "England is much more advanced."

"In that case," interposed Dr. Raphael Lempkin, consultant of the Board of Economic Warfare, "why did you propose your famous Beveridge plan for England?"

"What are you trying to do," choked Sir William, "insult me?"

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—Heavy feeding demand for wheat, emphasized by reports the Commodity Credit Corporation may exhaust its stocks before the end of August, brought buying into the wheat pit today and prices were up fractionally to more than a cent.

Oats were off early in the session on expectations more Canadian oats and barley would be imported to the East through Buffalo, but rallied sharply later. The generally tight feed situation and belief many producers will keep oats on their farms served to support prices.

Wheat finished ¼-1¼ higher: July, d.44¼; September, 1.45¾@1.45⅝; oats gained ⅛-½ and rye finished unchanged to 1¼ higher.

Lewis Obtains $3-a-Day Raise For Ill. Miners

day 42-hour week to a six-day 48-hour week.

On the basis of a $7 a day basic pay for underground work, pay for six days would jump from $45.50 a week, not counting the minor concessions ordered by WLB, to a new high of $63.50 a week including the WLB concessions.

However, it was doubted that the mines would be called upon to work 48 hours every week, although it was expected that the longer work would be required for some time to make up for time lost due to the three general coal strikes.

Other provisions of the agreement with the Illinois group called for a two-year contract until March 31, 1945, with all adjustments retroactive to April 1, 1943, the date of expiration of the old agreement. Provision also was made for a clause pledging no strikes for the duration of the agreement. Both clauses were required under the original WLB order turning down Lewis' demand for portal to portal pay.

WLB, in rejecting the demand, however, left the way open for a bargained settlement of the issue at a future date, or a settlement by appeal to the courts or to the wage-hour division of the Department of Labor. The issue arises out of Lewis' claim that he is entitled to payment for "travel time" from the face to the mouth of the mines under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

WLB Scrutiny Expected

WLB was expected to scrutinize the agreement to determine whether it was a valid settlement of possible claims arising under the Fair Labor Standards Act or a hidden wage increase which the board would be compelled to reject.

A portion of the $1.25 payment—probably 49 cents—involved payment during the next two years on a compromise basis of claims which Lewis contends have been accumulating since October, 1938, when the Fair Labor Standards Act went into effect.

The remainder—about 76 cents—is in payment for portal to portal time each day from now on as it accumulates at straight time rates. The parties placed the amount of travel time at 54 minutes a day—based on a Department of Labor survey which they said WLB overlooked. The figures involve a 15 per cent reduction of the amount actually due to provide a fund to pay the outside men who have no travel time the same $1.25 a day.

Army Seizes Needed Poultry From Trucks on Road in Blow at Black Market

under authority given in the Second War Powers Act.

According to the plan, which will be in full operation today, all poultry trucks will be stopped. The Delaware police will ask for the driver's poultry trucking permit and OPA officials on the scene will examine the "manifest" which states amount of shipment, grade, price paid, and destination.

The Army then will use its "discretion" about the requisition. Not all manifests showing a legal ceiling price paid will be honored, OPA officials said, for "cash payments on the side" have been so prevalent in the area the listed price has grown to mean little.

If the driver wishes to take the load on to a processing plant selected by the Army and get the ¾ cent per pound allowed for shrinkage and trucking, well and good. If not, the Army will take over the load at 29½ cents a pound, plus ¼ cent per pound allowed for sales to the Government.

Trucks have been hired to transport loads accepted on the highway. OPA said one large plant near Salisbury, Md., would be used to process the requisitioned cargoes and that other plants might later be brought into the picture.

The drivers will be given requisition papers which can be cashed through regular Government procedure.

Members of the Senate committee, recommending such action on July 6, said:

"To assist in the drying up of the black market and to secure adequate supplies, the committee advocates that the armed forces requisition poultry found in the black market and pay the ceiling prices for it."

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown said: "This action strikes directly at the chiseler and black market operator who places personal profit above the needs of the men fighting to defend the country. No honest trucker or shipper can be hurt, since the Army pays to the owner the maximum lawful price."

"Dignity Of Congress"

"It is a question of whether the dignity of Congress is to be respected or spurned." So spoke Mr. Eugene L. Garey in protest against the reluctance of Government officials to give confidential information to the Cox Committee of which he happens to be chief counsel.

We wonder if the dignity of Congress is respected when a committee counsel is permitted to browbeat witnesses in star chamber proceedings. We wonder if the dignity of Congress is respected when a committee counsel subjects witnesses to leading questions of the "Have-you-stopped-beating-your-wife?" variety. We wonder if the dignity of Congress is respected when a committee counsel conducts an inquiry on the "principle"—as Mr. Garey felicitously phrased it—of "the seizure of the headlines" and the "principle"—again in Mr. Garey's words—"that the committee must keep the commission's side of the case from reaching the public."

We wonder how much dignity Congress will have left if it allows this Cox Committee travesty on the American judicial process to continue.

The miracle of our shipbuilding program is being felt in the sharp increase in our lend-lease shipments. Mr. Edward R. Stettinius, jr., lend-lease administrator, has announced that lend-lease aid rendered during June for the first time topped the billion-dollar mark. This was almost 300 million dollars above the shipments in May, and makes the grand total up till the end of that month $12,923,000,000. It is a fabulous total, though, of course, it doesn't represent actual arrivals. Shipments have to run the risk of loss from submarine attack; but, though sinkings must have reduced the grand total considerably, the decisive check that has lately been administered to the U-boat is evidence that most of the June shipments arrived safely at destination. The distribution of lend-lease supplies as to destination is not given in the June report. However, it is known that several months ago Russia supplanted Britain as the chief recipient of lend-lease aid. This fact and the availability of the Mediterranean as a shipping route may thus be responsible for the stepping up of shipments in June.

How useful is our aid in munitions and food to Russia has become the reiterated testimony of our Russian ally. With so much of its area still in German hands, food has become the first concern of the Russian government. Moreover, the Russians are taking industrial facilities to offset their losses and to maintain the output of munitions which they are pouring into the battle. That our aid is paying huge dividends is obvious from the success of the Russians on the Eastern Front. They have pinned down by far the bulk of the Wehrmacht. In the air and on the sea and in Italy, the other fighting Allies are pulling their weight mightily, but the Russians are still awaiting a second front which would take 30 divisions off their backs. That time might soon come. But as long as it is delayed, there is all the more reason to pour aid into Russia.

There is no longer much dissent from this proposition. Those who ask what we are getting in return are being answered by the battle news. If the Russian pressure keeps up, the answer will be an early victory. It is impossible to find a standard of values with which to compare our contribution to Russia's and Russia's reciprocal contribution. How can one assess the lives that Russia is giving by the goods we are giving?

Such a task is difficult, moreover, in respect of our dealings with our other Allies. Their reciprocal lend-lease is mounting along with our lend-lease. Our Allies have furnished services for our troops abroad, machine tools, processes, munitions, food, ships, and all manner of help which are not susceptible of bookkeeping. In evidence before the House Appropriations Committee, Maj. George Spiegelberg, the Army's recorder in Europe, estimated that it would require half a division of trained personnel to place valuations on materials received as reciprocal aid from Britain with sufficient accuracy so that a sterling or dollar record could be maintained. An example of progressive reverse lend-lease is given in the letter appearing in an adjoining column today from the Australian News and Information Bureau. It is the easiest thing, evidently, to underestimate reverse lend-lease aid. As this war marches on to victory, the fact is that we are all "mixed up together," in Mr. Churchill's phrase, in a pooling of men and resources. This is the prime insurance of victory and the best hope for a peace when we shall have to live together again without the benefit of association in the crucible of war.

On Optimism

At the Navy Department press conference the other day Secretary Knox, Undersecretary Forrestal, Vice Admiral Horne and Mr. Charles E. Wilson scolded us—with or without OWI imprimatur—very roundly for letting too much cheerfulness break through. The war, they declared, will probably not be over before 1949 and victory will require a fleet seven times greater than the one now afloat. In short, there is no justification for the wave of this optimism now sweeping the country. Through optimism, it seems, we are somehow losing "the will to produce" those armaments necessary to victory.

It strikes us that unless Mr. Knox and his associates are in possession of facts which are not in general possession, they were laying it on unnecessarily thick. You will remember that in the early weeks and months of the war in the Pacific there was a carefully calculated official optimism, utterly belied by reports, against which we protested in these columns. Abruptly the official keynote changed and extravagant pessimism—"We are losing the war!" We are taking a terrible beating!"—became a kind of general chorus which continued throughout most of 1942.

The trouble with all this kind of thing is that it looks like a leaf out of one of those books on "sales psychology" on which the advertising pundits used to set so much store. The idea used to be that Americans could not be induced to wash themselves or to brush their teeth until they were confronted with the prospect of becoming social pariahs. Now the idea seems to be that unless Americans are scared to death, they will refuse to earn high wages by making airplanes and ships. The argument, however, might be a bit more impressive if the official spokesmen were always consistent in their statements. This they are not. Secretary Knox, for example, has been known to reverse himself on occasion. And we recall a certain difference of opinion between Messrs. Knox and Stimson about the significance of a supposed air raid on Los Angeles. We also remember Admiral Halsey's prediction of victory over Japan before the end of 1943. This seemed to us at the time extravagantly optimistic, and we said so, but it was scarcely less extreme than the official view that the war will drag on for another 6½ years.

The same newspapers that published Mr. Knox's statements also carried a statement by Mr. James A. Farley praising the great achievements in production, and predicting that the collapse of Germany will come before the end of the year and that of Japan much sooner than we think. True Mr. Farley's views, though often intelligent, are no longer official. But what about Mr. A. C. C. Hill, jr., of the WPB, who tells us that so far from deteriorating through overoptimism, the home front is "sound and vigorous"? And what about Col. Nikolai Zabotin, the new military attache of the Soviet Legation in Canada, who is quite official in his way, and who brings news that "the morale of the German army grows progressively worse"? This is in almost direct contradiction to Admiral Horne's information that there will be "no such moral collapse of the German army as there was in 1918." Really it seems to us that the authorities should get their story straight and stick to it. Was it not for this among other purposes that the OWI was set up?

The truth is, of course, that it is no longer possible to conceal from the peoples on either side of the great struggle that the tide has turned. Military leaders always tend to wage wars on the theory that they will last forever, but it is perfectly obvious that wars do not and cannot last forever. History, indeed, gives us terms like "the Thirty Years War" and "the Hundred Years War," but each of these covers a whole congeries of wars, not a single sustained struggle. Historically, the present war will be inseparable from the war of 1914-18, despite the full generation of armed truce. In 1918 the end came with a suddenness that astonished the military leaders no less than the peoples concerned. The inability of statesmen and soldiers to adjust their mentalities so suddenly to peace was in large part responsible for their failure to achieve an enduring peace.

Peace needs preparation no less than war. And while the generals and admirals are quite right to keep their minds exclusively on their battlefields, their maps and their supply problems, it is not too early for the rest of us to begin to look a bit beyond such things.

Sicilian Campaign

Given the size of Sicily, the large number of Axis troops garrisoned there, and the efforts made by the Fascist government over a long period of years in building up Sicily's defenses, it would have been a fair assumption, before the battle for the island began, that the struggle would last as long as the struggle in Tunisia. In Tunisia the Allies took a little more than six months to achieve complete and final mastery. But in view of the way the Battle of Sicily has been going, it will now be surprising if it takes six weeks or anything like it. The most difficult part of any amphibious campaign is the initial or landing phase. That proved relatively easy in the case of the invasion of Sicily. And within a week after British, Canadian and American troops had secured bridgeheads on the island, a third of Sicily was in Allied hands.

Now, while American troops, having captured Caltanisetta, are pushing ahead beyond the rail and road junction point of Enna, the British Eighth Army under the redoubtable General Montgomery is fighting for control of the strategically vital port and air center of Catania. But, except for the German divisions in the latter sector, the Allies do not appear to be encountering much resistance, either on land or in the air, where our forces now enjoy complete supremacy. The Italian troops, as a matter of fact, give every evidence of being weary and dispirited, and the civil population is manifesting no opposition to the invaders. In town after town occupied by Allied troops the latter have been greeted as liberators. There is now a strong possibility that a general collapse of Axis resistance in Sicily is not far off. We have every reason to be tremendously gratified by the campaign. It is going far better than anyone had any right to expect.

Price Of A Meal

On hearing of the order rolling back restaurant prices to April levels, Mayor LaGuardia pertinently inquired "Who is going to enforce it?" In our opinion the question was extremely pertinent. For the regulation is unenforceable. That is not entirely because it would require a huge army of snoopers to uncover evidence of violations, but because the order itself is a fantastic example of bureaucratic bungling.

Local spokesmen for the hotel and restaurant industry have stated that the rollback order will not sensibly affect the local scale of restaurant prices. If that should prove to be the case, despite consumer evidence to the contrary, the OPA order will be merely a futile gesture, in so far as this community is concerned. Moreover, there are a thousand and one ways in which price regulations can be evaded under the existing methods of serving food to the public. The OPA order directs attention to only a few of them, but notes enough to reveal the utter hopelessness of the task set for its policemen. Really effective protection of the public against restaurant overcharges would require a revolutionary overhauling of the present method of doing business.

Price Administrator Brown says that price regulation to be effective must be accompanied by standardization of the controlled product. To be sure. But it would probably be impossible to find a business in which standardization is more difficult of attainment than the restaurant business as conducted in this country. Patrons pay for innumerable intangible things when they buy food and drink. They pay for better air, more space, atmosphere, service and for all sorts of things that make the scale of prices differ widely between one public eating place and another. Thus a regulatory agency has no means of determining what would be a fair or representative scale of prices in any community or in any restaurant for any designated meal. It may be that we ought to have standard meals. Standardization would require that restaurants would have to agree to serve certain standard meals certified as to the quantity and quality of individual portions. Even in such cases, there would be considerable room for evasion. Perhaps OPA thinks the public would soon learn how to identify substandard servings and assist enforcement. Such a system of regulation would certainly not appeal to Americans, who are habituated to variety and accustomed to a wide range of choice, though regimented fare is the lesser of the two evils, unless the restaurant and hotel groups band together for the purpose of self-policing.

In any case, the OPA is open to criticism for its propensity to essay the impossible—a habit largely accountable for the low esteem in which it is now held. It is not necessary to know anything about the restaurant business to realize that OPA is once more embarking on a quixotic adventure that will invite the same sort of derisive laughter that greeted the efforts of the famous don.

WASHINGTON FLOWER VENDORS

The vendors are here in the shady streets
As they were in the quiet days before yesterday.
You can buy an armful of flowers for men, wounded,
Alone after terrible battles,
Or a branch of color for a silver bowl in a high room.
Those yellow roses from an ancient root—
I hear the click of the latch on the gate
And know the sun hot on smooth brick
And how the climbing bush was heavy with bloom
To the eaves of the stable.
Faint smell of straw—the sound of a horse's hoof
Stamping the silence.
There was the strawberry shrub, piquant as wild fruit.
Lilies-of-the-valley in their season
And the moss-rose seldom found in these days.
Tight pink thousand-leaf roses,
Mock-orange rich as country cream.
Beetles under the loose stones in the north corner
Where moss was thick from a century of rains
Falling down through the ivy over the grey wall,
And yellow roses to cut in the cool of the evening.

German Indemnity

By Reginald Parker

What To Collect

ASIDE FROM the political and territorial claims the United Nations will present to the Germans after the war, there exists also the problem of private indemnification. The Germans will have to make good whatever damage they have done to anybody. Not the Nazis alone but Germany as such will have to bear the burden of restoration, since it is the German Reich with which we are at war and not the National Socialist Party or their leaders.

The peace treaties ought not to differentiate between claimants according to their nationality or residence, though we may allow a diversity of the procedure to be followed. In view of the peculiar nature of the Nazi atrocities, even citizens of Germany should be permitted to raise claims. In order to avoid collusion, the claims will have to be represented through the government of the plaintiff or, in the case of persons not citizens of the United Nations, through special inter-Allied commissions.

Most important of all, of course, is the question as to the grounds upon which claims may be based. To confine them to military damage would mean that we do not allow compensation for some of the most hair-raising crimes of our time, such as the extinction of Lidice. Any illegal act done by the German government, the Nazi Party or agents of either should be allowed as a ground to raise a claim. And "illegal" does not mean that we are going to consider valid the changes the Hitler gang has made in the laws of Germany and Austria as well as the occupied areas. Anything that was against the law of the land as it existed before Hitler came is illegal; Hitler's might can never be right.

Cities In Ruins

Germany, with her cities in ruins, her territory decreased, her manpower depleted, her population starving, her fields bearing but a fraction of the usual crop, much of her stocks in gold as well as natural resources gone, will not be able to rebuild the world she has destroyed. We must carefully avoid that measure that offhand seems to be the best under the circumstances. To demand everything and take what we can get would transform the Germans permanently into a nation of beggars, that is to say, of cheap labor competitors, of producers below the world market price, and of nonconsumers. During the peace negotiations we should at once carefully ascertain the extent of Germany's ability to pay and we should not allow claims to exceed this limit.

The assets of Germany and her subjects cannot be appraised before the war is over. They are likely to decrease the longer the war lasts. Soon after the cessation of hostilities, a complete census of everything that is of value in Germany, regardless of whether it belongs to private individuals or the government, should take place. Experts will estimate the German labor and production capacity during a certain period of years, which, in my opinion, should not be extended over 25 or 30 years, because it would not be just to let the Germans suffer for their deeds beyond one generation. Appropriate steps will be indispensable in order to prevent any disposal of such assets.

Assets of Germany

In view of the fact that Germany's assets will cover only a fraction of the claims that are going to be presented, we ought to deviate from the general bankruptcy principle of treating creditors equally and establish different classes of creditors in accordance with their present needs. There are persons who undoubtedly have gained rather than lost from the fact that they have become emigrants; it is a matter of equitable justice that they be forced to reduce their claims accordingly.

By all means should suits be brought exclusively through official governmental agencies. Right now, organizations, mostly of and for refugees, are mushrooming all over New York which purport to "take care" of the members' postwar settlement with Germany. Needless to say that these organizations, which are not always run by the most desirable type of lawyers, European as well as American, are apt to do severe damage to a harmonious and just attempt to give some kind of equal justice under the peace treaties. Not only do they quite often demand juicy fees but also do those organizations stimulate the filing of claims which otherwise would not be raised. This should not be tolerated.

The Government should make it clear that only legally designated Government agencies are going to handle this business—preferably without advice from claim-collecting organizations.

Nemesis

By Barnet Nover

Burned Bridges Of The Axis

ADOLF HITLER was so confident of success that from the beginning of his period of power he ruthlessly burned his bridges behind him, and not only his bridges but Germany's as well.

His regime, he boasted, would last a thousand years. Any Nazi would be glad to settle, at this time, for a thousand days. For life has been sweet to the masters of the "Master Race." The wealth of a continent has been theirs for the looting; power without limit; and an endless opportunity to satisfy their insatiable blood lust.

The Nazis left open no avenue of retreat. They were convinced they had no need of it. They were whole-hoggers from the beginning. Believing in and practicing total tyranny and total war they now face total defeat and total destruction. The world they hoped to conquer and rule is now a shrinking island shaken from within by seismic disturbances and threatened from without by a tidal wave of wrath.

BOTH IN THEIR rise to power and in their efforts to consolidate that power, the Nazis were cynically indifferent as to the means they employed. Only the ends counted. And they gloried in rather than regretted the fact that these ends were destructive of civilization.

Over a span of centuries and millennia the human race had slowly and painfully established certain minimum standards and values of right conduct among men and nations. The Nazis were utterly contemptuous of these standards and values, though they never hesitated to employ them against Germany's intended victims.

In the days when the Third Reich was still weak, when a hundredth of the force the Allies are now employing against the Axis would have been sufficient to smash Hitler's regime, there were no more clamorous advocates of the right of self-determination than the Nazis. There is no right of self-determination which the Nazis recognize in Europe today.

Before Germany was ready for war, Hitler again and again proclaimed himself a man of peace. He gambled on the possibility that millions in Britain and France and elsewhere would believe him against their better judgment since they so desperately wanted to believe him. In fact, Hitler's greatest asset in the years between 1933 and 1941 was the world's love of peace.

Because of it he was successful in using nonaggression pacts as instruments of aggression; in keeping his potential enemies divided; and in destroying them one by one.

THERE IS NO parallel in history to the ruthlessness employed by the Nazis against their victims. What the conquerors of the past did in isolated instances, Hitler has done wholesale. What they did, more often than not, in blind rage, he has done in cold blood, with scientific savagery.

There was one Carthage; there have been a hundred Lidices. The shooting of hostages by the Nazis has become so frequent an occurrence that news of the latest outrages is to be found only in the inside pages of our newspapers.

Jews and Poles have been butchered by the millions; Norwegians, Hollanders, Russians, Greeks, Yugoslavs, Belgians and others have been enslaved by the tens of millions. From Stalingrad to Bristol, from the North Cape to the Aegean the Nazi beast has everywhere left his mark.

A GREAT CLAMOR has arisen in the Nazi-Fascist press and over the Nazi-Fascist radio over the bombing of Rome, and this clamor finds an echo in some Allied quarters.

Certainly nobody in Allied lands can find anything to rejoice over in any destruction that may have been visited on the Eternal City which is the heritage of all civilized peoples. But the point must never be lost to sight that during the months and years in which Rome, alone of Europe's warring capitals, was spared aerial attack, it remained the seat of the Italian war effort, an important railroad center, a military camp. Our best instincts in this, as in so many other particulars, were being used against us.

The day when that was possible is over. We have learned enough from the past not to become the victim of our good intentions. The Nazis and Fascists who have sown the wind must now reap the whirlwind.

Melbourne Hospital

Your excellent article on the U. S. Medical Corps, based on an interview with Brig. Gen. C. C. Hillman, makes clear the fact that many hospitals in Australia and New Zealand have been made available to the U. S. Army under reverse lend-lease.

The caption under the picture of the U. S. Army General Hospital in Melbourne, however, may be misinterpreted, since it states that it was " . . . built with lend-lease money." This hospital, the largest and most modern civilian hospital in Australia, was planned, and building had started, long before Japan struck in the Pacific. It was handed over to the U. S. Army direct from the builders' hands, without cost to the United States, in spite of acute shortage of civilian hospitals in Melbourne. This was done as part of Australia's reciprocal aid to the United States. This aid includes provision of food, equipment, ammunition, stores, transport, strategic works, and general services. Up to the end of last year meat products alone supplied to the United States by Australia under reverse lend-lease exceeded the quantity of meat products supplied by the United States to other United Nations.

Mr. Fraser's Reply

A letter, making decidly personal references to the undersigned and signed by Wilbur F. Murra, appeared in your July 13 issue.

At the time I was on vacation at Virginia Beach, Va., and did not see it.

Mr. Murra, it seems, devoted his opening paragraphs to lavish praise of The Post, its editorials, features, etc., then proceeded to get in a few well-aimed blows at the Committee on American History and myself.

Perhaps, if I followed the same technique, I should start out by also telling The Post what a marvelous paper it is, but—frankly—I am not going to do anything of the kind. The Post needs no sickening praise from me or anybody else. Nor am I going to camouflage my letter by flattery wholly unrelated to the subject matter.

What I do want to call the attention to your readers to is Mr. Murra's virtual request of The Post not to further publicize the whole issue, or give any attention to the views of the chairman of Committee on American History.

Mr. Murra has a very good reason for this: as secretary of the National Council for the Social Studies, an organization which I have repeatedly charged has played a leading role in the dilution of American history courses in our secondary schools, he is naturally very anxious that disclosures of facts gathered by the committee be denied access to the public prints.

Therefore, he is desperately hoping that nothing further be brought out on the matter. Indeed, he refers to a personal letter to you as possibly having arranged that very thing; a copy of which he had sent to me.

This is truly interesting. As I do not write personal letters to managing editors, I am at a disadvantage, perhaps.

However, Mr. Editor, I am just naive enough to believe that The Post is an independent newspaper, and that it has no private arrangements with Mr. Murra nor anybody else as to what news it shall or shall not print. If this is not correct, I am sure you will be willing to so state.

HUGH RUSSELL FRASER.
Chairman, Committee on American History.
Washington, July 18.

Editor's Note: Mr. Fraser is quite right; The Post has no such private arrangements, of course.

Giraud And The Nazis

In Ottawa last Friday General Giraud, without specifying, said, "Not all is bad in the National Socialist system. Some of its accomplishments have been magnificent."

It is not difficult to discover what our State Department's favorite Frenchman likes about Nazi Germany. He explained it all in a 17,000-word memorandum to Marshal Petain after his escape from Konigstein prison. He attributed the fall of France to the 40-hour week, declining birth rate, lack of discipline, and the Popular Front. Such things are not tolerated in Nazi Germany. Nor is the republican form of government in which, to quote Giraud, "France luxuriated" from 1918 to 1940. He does not mention as contributing to the fall of France such factors as appeasers, collaborationists, an antiquated army or other factors displeasing to him and the recipient of his report—Marshal Petain.

He topped it all off by saying, " . . . sincere Frenchmen who have been in Germany as prisoners of war can bear witness to its prosperity and to its physical and moral health. Admittedly the Germans do not perhaps have liberty, but there is certainly neither disorder nor anarchy. Everywhere it is work, the only fortune for a people which wishes to live and live happily. May France remember and profit by it."

And our President and State Department would have us believe that it is General de Gaulle who is the fascist! The President's adherence to State Department advice on (1) French policy and (2) in slapping Henry Wallace and the BEW has cost him the respect of those who have been his most ardent supporters for more than 10 years. Our soldiers are not fighting for the Nazi brand of "moral health."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Baseball A La War Communique

New York.—It was admitted here today that a battle between the York Giants and the Chicago Cubs is on. Official comment was limited, however, to a brief statement by the Giants that the fight is progressing favorably. Reports from Stockholm say that the Cubs have the upper hand. From Swiss sources comes a bulletin that the Giants scored heavily in the opening moments of the encounter.

By Reuters: The Giants claim an initial success. "We struck out two men in the first inning, and possibly three," said the statement.

The above was supplemented by the following bulletin from Giant headquarters in the third innings:

"Our side scored heavily in the second inning. It is believed we tallied five runs. Three runners were seen to cross the plate. One other runner was proceeding toward the plate when last reported. A fifth man was observed rounding third.

Later.—The Chicago Cubs deny a debacle. They insist that the Giants have been held everywhere along the line. "At the moment of this bulletin," says an announcement from Cub headquarters, "one of our men has connected for two bases and probably three. He hit the second ball pitched, if not the first."

Berne, Switzerland.—The New York Giants, according to information here, had no pitchers knocked out of the box, as claimed by the Cubs. "All our twirlers carried out their objectives and returned safely," said a statement intercepted here.

Geneva.—Rome radio reports that, while details are sketchy, good progress seems evident by the Cubs in the all-out clash with the Giants. The Giants threatened to break through in the fifth, keeping men on bases most of the time. The rally was blocked by a double, and possibly by a triple, play. Two Giant runners are known to have been thrown out. A third was observed limping. Bad weather prevented more accurate observations.

New York.—No official announcement is available from either side, but on the basis of such information as can be pieced together the following summary is believed to be fairly accurate:

Giants: Six runs known to have been tallied; three runs probably tallied; four runs possibly tallied.

Cubs: Five runs known to have been tallied; five probably tallied; two runs thought to have been tallied.

Strike-outs: By Giants, eight positive, four probable. Cubs, four positive, eight probable.

Window-Box Petunias

Within the tenemental cells
The wearied dream through troubled sleeps;
Small peace or comfort with them dwells
Where Poverty his prisoners keeps.

Yet on a sill, with radiant bloom,
A box of vivid flowers grow;
A sense of clean and sweet perfume
These shameful streets so seldom know.

Out of the depths, still will arise
Man's longing, keen as desert-thirst—
A glimpse of Beauty for his eyes—
A ghost of her whom he loved first.

Pro-De Gaulle

We Americans who champion General de Gaulle do so because we are interested in our future relations with the rest of the world. The Administration's, the State Department's and the press' attitude toward the situation goes against the grain of our American ideals.

Because we started our national history as a handful of "underdogs" with an idea, plenty of spirit, and the courage of convictions; and because with this equipment we came out on top, it has always been the typical American idea to champion those in the same boat.

Therefore, whatever public opinion rises here to cheer General de Gaulle, we are surprised that our State Department "slaps us down," so to speak. We are told in Hitlerian fashion—"The State Department knows what it's doing—we shouldn't question." So we sink back and wait for further developments. The press follows through by pointing out that it is really not a success for General de Gaulle but a grave diplomatic error, etc. We sit back and take it with a grain of salt and wonder "what next?" PAPA VICTOIRE.

A Vote For Britain

I read the Gallup Poll in Thursday's paper about who has contributed most to the war. And it seems to me something ought to be said about it. Obviously you cannot evaluate so many different efforts if you are going to base your estimation on quantity of blood or goods. Everybody has had a vital share, but I think people's memories are very short when they put either Russia or America at the top of the list. Maybe they did excel in quantity, but where would they be if England had recognized her defeat at Dunkirk and been "sensible"? Who staved off complete disaster with bare hands? Who turned the tide at the zero hour? My vote goes to Britain.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Campaign Of 1944

ANY MAN who is fit to be President in 1945 must, when his name is mentioned today, feel very humble indeed. For he will have the responsibility of making certain that our dead shall not have died in vain. That will be his task. The man who can hope to be equal to it will look upon it not as a dazzling ambition but as a stern and awful duty.

LIPPMANN

He will have to comfort the stricken, bind up the wounds of war, show millions upon millions the way back to private peace and personal security, and redeem with honest measure the hopes they have paid for with their sweat, their blood, and their tears. Much will be asked, much will be expected, of the next President of the United States. The citizen, then, must shudder when he sees the hack politicians who talk as if they were calculating the odds on a horse race which they hope their favorite will win because the other horse breaks his leg.

THERE IS a wide gulf opening up between the professional hacks and the people who fight, who work, who wait anxiously for their sons and their husbands. The people watch these hacks arguing about who can win the election. The people, the great mass of them, find life much too serious to give a tinker's dam about party politics. They are concerned about who can govern the country. These are times that try men's souls, and the actions which will have to be decided upon in the years beginning in 1945 will shape the destiny of the Nation and of the world for generations to come. To reduce all this to the dimensions of a contest in a political precinct is vulgar trifling with the lives and the fortunes of the people.

That is why so much hangs upon the movement within the Republican Party to make it a party which is fit to govern. It is possible that the Republican Party might win the election not on its own merits but by the default of the Democrats. War brings hardships and hardships make grievances, and demagogues can exploit them. But if the Republican Party is led by men who want to win that kind of election, then the result will be another Harding Administration. As this war is an immensely greater war than the last, involving the whole life of our people more profoundly, so will the scandal and disaster be greater too.

AND EVEN if, as seems likely, our people remember 1920 and are forewarned against it, the fact that the Republican Party conducted a campaign at the Harding level would drag everything else down to that level. Fire will be fought with fire. When claptrap is the order of the day, it will be met with buncombe—nonsense with nonsense, trickery with trickery. And no matter who emerges the winner from the orgy of bombast and bamboozlement, the Nation will surely be the loser.

Moreover, the party which comes into power in such an election will scarcely have had time to answer the telegrams of congratulations before it is in fearful trouble. Having been driven by the demagoguery of the election to promise all kinds of attractive follies and to forswear the doing of the hard but inexorably necessary things, it will find the situations it must govern bear no relation whatever to the campaign talk. Its hands will be tied, it will choke on the foolish words it has spoken; unable to manage events by clear action and with firm popular support, the events will prove to be unmanageable.

Let no one think this could not happen. The world of 1945 will not be a world through which we can hope to muddle along, taking care of the deserving Democrats or Republicans as the case may be.

WHAT THEN is the real political issue of the 1944 campaign? Is it the black marks on the Democrats? Is it whether the Republicans adopt a formula of words condemning sin and promising heaven too? Not really. The issue is which party can form the central core of an Administration that can be entrusted with power.

Among the Democrats the question presents itself as to whether the party, which in the third term is now spent, stale, tired, and therefore stubborn, irritable, and sterile, can be rejuvenated, if disciplined, and given a fresh lease of life.

Among the Republicans the question is whether men who have been in the opposition so long that they know only how to complain, whine, charge, indict, and denounce, and cannot tell a mountain from a molehill, will give way to a coherent group of men of affairs who know what it takes to govern a country.

THE REAL issues are not verbal—to be discussed in carefully calculated speeches synthetically fabricated for candidates to read. Nor are they a matter of paper "programs," carefully cooked so they are all honey and no vinegar. The issue is men: whether seasoned men, with the character and the brains by which they can acquire wisdom, rise to power within their parties, and become the nucleus of a trustworthy Administration.

For no one will, because no one can, foresee the future clearly enough to define sharply what it will be necessary and desirable to do. We have to rely upon the judgment of men of principle in the presence of the unfolding situation. Therefore, what matters above all else is that the citizen, before he decides how he will vote, can have confidence that he is voting for a man with an organized party behind him, and that they are fit to govern.

Production Still Lagging

Only Slight Gains

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Staff Writer

War production was better but still in the doldrums during June, it was learned last night, with aircraft reportedly showing a gain of fewer than 50 planes over May.

The monthly report of the War Production Board is not due for several days but sources within the agency disclosed their concern over the continued "plateau" in production, which should still be rising steadily.

In most categories production was up, but not sufficiently so to meet the production rate necessary to achieve the 1943 goals.

The fact that only a few more planes were turned out in June than in May does not truly reflect progress which was made in the aircraft program, since each month brings emphasis on heavier warplanes. Still it was understood that output in terms of dollar value of planes and related munitions would not match the 5 per cent gain shown in May.

WPB officials have not given up hopes that the 1943 war production goals actually will be achieved, but they acknowledge that a vigorous spurt must take place in the last six months of this year to attain them.

Officials who are daily puzzling how to shake off the slump said a psychological letdown, caused by recent military victories, and overconfidence in an early end of the war, undoubtedly had something to do with the lag.

On top of this, they fear, is a tendency on part of management and labor to ease up on the production because of fears that they might soon work themselves out of Government contracts.

Design changes also have slowed up certain Army vehicles. Difficulties in getting an engine in mass production is holding up a new type plane. "Bugs" which developed in the substitution of steel shell casings for brass ones have necessitated further tinkering with production in that field. A bottleneck in axles is hurting heavy truck output.

D. C. Sergeant Is Awarded 5th Decoration

Technical Sergt. James E. Narem, 22, of 5210 Shadyside Avenue, Bradbury Heights, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Narem, who is now home on leave, received his fifth decoration for "outstanding ability and devotion to duty" yesterday.

The Eastern High School graduate has seen more than 100 hours of operational flight missions over Rabaul, the Solomons and other Jap-held bases. He is a radioman, cameraman and gunner on a Flying Fortress.

The announcement of the latest award to be given him came from Australia where Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of Allied air forces in the Southwest Pacific, revealed the awarding of the Air Medal to 31 officers and enlisted men, some of whom have fought the Japs since the beginning of the war. He said they also made long-range operational bombings.

General Kenney said Sergeant Narem had been given the Oak Leaf cluster in lieu of a second Distinguished Flying Cross for "extraordinary achievement" in 200 hours of flight missions from April 17 to December 31, 1942.

Sergeant Narem was most casual about his five decorations.

"Oh, they were for just flying around and bombing the Japs," he told reporters.

He has received the Silver Star, the Flying Cross with the oak leaf cluster, and the Air Medal with the oak leaf cluster. The oak leaf cluster denotes another medal has been awarded.

Born in Norfolk, Va., Narem, with his family, came here when he was 11.

He graduated from Eastern High in 1939 and entered the Army in the same year. He was sent almost immediately to Hawaii. He has a brother, Thomas, who is a technician in the Army.

At his home last night young Narem said that he had to return to duty by the end of this month.

State Dept. Gains Control Of OEW Policy

James F. Byrnes, director of War Mobilization, said today that the State Department has emerged in supreme control of foreign economic activities as a result of the recent shake-up which followed the dispute over foreign purchases between Vice President Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones.

Byrnes said at a press conference that Leo T. Crowley, new Director of Economic Warfare—a new office combining the former activities of both Wallace's Board of Economic Warfare and Jones' Foreign Purchase Corporations—"must consult the State Department in every field to determine what is the foreign policy of the United States."

Byrnes also stated that the State Department was appointing coordinators in various foreign areas to correlate the work of various civilian agencies operating in those areas. Byrnes said he knew three such coordinators already had been designated by the department, including one in North Africa, but he did not know their names.

Congress Desires Postwar Security Views, Pepper Says

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida warned yesterday that America "is going to lose the peace" unless the people stop quarreling over petty domestic matters and let Congress know how they stand on the greater issue of postwar world security.

Pepper told reporters in an interview that the people now have a chance to choose between "liberalism and internationalism" on the one hand and "reaction and isolationism" on the other.

In knocking out NYA, the National Resources Planning board and crop insurance, and in cutting OWI, Pepper said he believed Congress had misinterpreted the "mandate" of the last election. He said the 1940 voters favored greater Government efficiency, but did NOT ask for "sabotage and reaction."

U. S. Ships Reach Turkey Direct

Izmir, Turkey, July 19 (Delayed) (AP).—The first Allied shipping to reach Turkey directly through the Mediterranean from the United States since the North African campaign has arrived in this southern Turkish port without incident.

The vessels were three medium-sized freighters with military and civilian supplies for Turkey, mostly lend-lease goods. The ships passed through the Sicilian channel on the last day of the bombardment of Pantelleria, close enough to see bombs bursting.

In Nip Territory

U. S. Bombers Batter Base Above Japan

By William L. Worden
Associated Press Staff Writer

Headquarters, Alaska Defense Command, July 20.—(Delayed).—Alaska pilots training in combat flying over Kiska celebrated today with the first successful raid on Japanese territory since the bombing of Tokyo.

Aleutians-based bombers returned without the loss of a plane from a long distance bombing of Paramushiro, Japan's northernmost military base. The raid came as a logical development after the American occupation of Attu. It had long been expected and prepared for, with Japanese shipping being swept from the northern seas by naval surface vessels.

The bombers were from the Army's Eleventh Air Force, which has done the lion's share of all flying in the Aluetians last year.

Returning pilots reported the bombing was no more difficult than flights against Japanese bases on American islands in the Aleutians. They came out of the overcast into clear skies above Paramushiro and looked down on a square mile of military installations. They saw some Japanese planes but none that wanted to fight.

Only light antiaircraft fire was met. Bombs were dropped near ships in the harbor. They saw what appeared to be an ancient fort, built long before bombers were ever made.

Nearby was a mile-long airplane landing strip.

Several large buildings were set afire.

The raiders, who were in the air for more than nine hours, spent at least 40 minutes over the target, climbing and circling before dropping their bomb loads. Bad weather areas forced them to take a circuitous route to Paramushiro, and clouds prevented the contemplated deck-level bombing when they were over the target.

The big bombers carried no special equipment except life rafts for possible forced landings on the cold sea. But all agreed the thing to do if their planes were crippled was to try to reach Russian territory.

The pilots, all veterans of raids on Attu or Kiska, knew they were making a dangerous survey flight in preparation for future attacks which will eventually hit all of the Kuriles and extend to the more thickly populated islands of Japan proper.

Capt. James L. Hudelson, Benton, Ill., who already holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal for his achievements in Aleutians combat flying, led the flight.

Rayburn Urged As Vice President

New Orleans, July 21 (AP).—Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana in addressing the Young Men's Business Club here today, proposed House Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas for Vice President in 1944.

"It is about time the South should be recognized by the Democratic Party in power and we should have representation on the national ticket," Hebert said.

"I nominate Speaker Rayburn for Vice President. He has made a great name for himself as Speaker."

Editors List Food Ideas

'Bungling' Blamed

By the Associated Press

The Republican Conngressional Food Study Committee reported yesterday that a survey of 1000 editors and publishers of trade, farm and other publications showed that "9 out of 10" blamed the Nation's food problems on "bungling, incompetency, mismanagement and waste in Washington."

Results of the survey were inserted in yesterday's postrecess edition of the Congressional Record by Representative Jenkins (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of the committee. Jenkins obtained permission to "revise and extend" his remarks on the last day Congress met.

He reported that replies to the questionnaires were received from 47 States, that 988 considered the question of food "paramount," and that 594 reported that their communities "already suffer from food shortages."

Lists Five Points

Jenkins said the survey showed:

1. 59.1 per cent of those replying said their communities were suffering from food shortages.

2. 53.1 per cent said meat was the most difficult food to obtain.

3. 76.8 per cent said the people in their communities were planning to use "all available land" for gardens this summer.

4. 40.6 per cent believed that the farmers in their territories would equal last year's production, with 25.3 per cent of the opinion 1942 production would be exceeded.

5. 84.8 per cent said manpower was the greatest handicap to farm production, with machinery and equipment running second.

Offers Answers

The committee's report on its survey listed these as some of the answers to a request for suggestions on what could be done to obtain greater food production and conserve available supplies:

"Defer farm labor, don't allow essential farm labor to take factory jobs; defer older men and high producing farmers; leave 18 and 19 year old boys on the farms; draft all manpower for Army, farm or factory; release men from the armed forces and return them to farms, at least seasonally."

Others included:

"Shoot all city farmers in Washington; let up cockeyed government regulations; get rid of New Deal boondoggling; get a new administration; return to the laws of supply and demand; cut Government extravagance and damn foolishness—these lower public morale."

Newsprint Price To Jump Sept. 1

The Office of Price Administration and the Canadian Price Board announced jointly last night that the ceiling price of standard newsprint paper will go up $4 per ton on September 1.

The joint announcement said other grades of newsprint will increase by similar amounts, and prices in Canada will be affected the same as in this country.

For standard newsprint, the boost will bring the manufacturers' ceiling "port price" to $58 a ton. The announcement attributed the rise to "increased costs of wood procurement."

Ickes' Speech Cleared

Absolved Of 'Battle' Charge

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, has been absolved by the Office of War Information of a Republican charge that he had reopened the Battle of Washington.

The OWI announced yesterday that Ickes' speech in New York, in which the self-styled "Curmudgeon" said that any criticism for failures in running the war would have to be leveled at dollar-a-year men and not New Dealers, was cleared by it "without any policy objections having been raised."

Ickes, describing himself as one of the few New Dealers left in Washington, told his audence Tuesday night that it was pointless to blame New Dealers for what goes on here in running the war.

"If I know anything about Washington," he said, "it is that the dollar-a-year men have been running the war—men like Knudsen, Nelson, Stettinius, and many others whom I might mention . . ."

Resignation Speculation

Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (Republican) of Massachusetts wanted to know whether Ickes, in line with President Roosevelt's warning against bickering between Government agencies, had submitted his resignation to the White House.

Stephen Early, the President's secretary, was asked yesterday if Ickes' speech had been approved. He explained that Mr. Roosevelt's newest order had not relieved the OWI of the responsibility of passing on speeches. If OWI had difficulties with a speech, he said, it was then passed on to the Office of War Mobilization. And, Mr. Early continued, if OWM found itself stumped, then it was possible that the speech would go to President Roosevelt.

Without Assistance

In the case of Ickes' speech, however, OWI did all the copy reading, and apparently President Roosevelt knew nothing about it. The statement from Elmer Davis' outfit said:

"The speech was submitted by the Department of the Interior to the OWI speech clearance unit late on Saturday afternoon. Clearance was started Monday morning.

"Meanwhile, a few minor changes had been made in the Department of the Interior, and some officials of that department, due to a misunderstanding, believed that these changes represented OWI clearance. Thereupon the speech was released.

"Although this release occurred before OWI had completed clearance, it is apparent that the Department of the Interior acted in good faith in the matter and that there was no conscious effort made to violate the OWI speech clearance procedures.

"For the record, clearance was completed withou any policy objections having been raised."

Campaign Material

There were indications that the Republicans will not have forgotten the Ickes speech when the 1944 political season opens. Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican) of New York said that Ickes' criticism was typical of 100 per cent New Dealers who wanted to destroy the influence of any conservatives holding office in Washington. Fish praised the businessmen who are working here and also the "few conservative elements left in the Democratic Party, such as Senators Byrd and Tydings."

Although Secretary Ickes referred to Lieut. Gen. William Knudsen, WPB Director Donald M. Nelson and Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius as "dollar-a-year men," it was noted that these men are no longer on that basis. Knudsen's Army pay is $8000 a year, while Nelson's Government salary is $15,000, and Stettinius' $10,000 a year.

Getting U. S. Out of Business Poses Problem, Jones Says

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones said last night in a radio talk that the Government had spent 25 billion dollars in the last three years to build industrial plants and other facilities and asserted the disposition and utilization of the properties will be one of the Nation's greatest problems after the war.

For his own part, Jones said, he had no fear "but that Government will deal fairly with industry, because I believe that the people of our country want to maintain the principle of private initiative and private enterprise."

Jones foresaw differing opinions on the use of the plants. Some, he said, will want the Government to stay in business and operate on Federal funds, while others will advocate scrapping a large portion of the plants to eliminate "undue competition." Still others, he said, will be looking for bargains, hoping to buy at Government sacrifice prices.

The Nation must be on guard against "undue pressure" from any of these groups, he said, adding:

"Where any industry is able to absorb Government facilities in its line, on a basis fair to Government, that policy should be adopted, the Government selling or leasing the facilities on fair and reasonable terms. In those industries where Government facilities approximate or far exceed those in private hands, the solutions will be more difficult."

The Government, he said, will own all of the synthetic rubber industry and Congress must determine how much of it will be kept in operation. The Government has built and holds title to three big steel plants and 120 smaller steel plants and additions and thus will own about 10 per cent of the total steel capacity of the country.

With an investment of approximately 430 million dollars in magnesium plants, he said, the Government will own about 92 per cent of the total production. It has built and owns nine plants for aluminum production and 45 plants for fabricating aluminum, he said, with a total investment of 760 million dollars.

WLB Takes Jurisdiction Over Petrillo Record Dispute

The War Labor Board has decided to take jurisdiction over the dispute between James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, and seven transcription companies, it was learned yesterday.

The board, by unanimous vote, decided to select an investigator to probe into the merits of the dispute—revolving around the refusal of Petrillo's union to make any more radio transcriptions—and decide whether the action is in effect a "strike."

Petrillo contended at a WLB hearing that his men were not on strike—that they merely decided to quit working for the transcription companies more than a year ago and did not intend to seek further employment with them. Pointing out that the transcriptions were destroying work opportunities for musicians, he said, "We are not going to play our own funeral march any more."

If the board finds that a strike exists, its policy would require it to order the men back to work pending settlement of the dispute. The companies had asked the board to assume jurisdiction and order Petrillo to resume the manufacture of transcriptions. Petrillo contended that the board lacked jurisdiction.

'Anybody's Guess,' Says Soong

T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, said after a meeting of the Pacific War Council yesterday that it is "anybody's guess" how long the war against Japan will last.

He made this reply to a reporter's request for comment on the remark yesterday by Vice Admiral Frederick Horne that the Navy is planning for a war in the Pacific "at least until 1949."

Yesterday's council meeting was the first with President Roosevelt in several weeks, Dr. Soong said Mr. Roosevelt reviewed Pacific operations, particularly the number of ships lost by Japan. He added that the President told about the attack by Army Liberator bombers on Paramushiro in the Kurile Islands north of Japan proper.

James F. Byrnes, Director of War Mobilization, also was asked about Horne's statement.

"If anyone else is planning on that basis, I do not know that they are," Byrnes told his press conference.

Rumania Reported Refusing to Fight

Istanbul (Delayed), July 19 (AP).—Diplomatic sources said today that Premier Ion Antonescu of Rumania has flatly refused German demands that Rumania participate in the fighting this summer against Russia.

Antonescu was reported to have told Nazi representatives two weeks ago that Rumania already had made great sacrifices, and henceforth would only defend her own borders.

Nats' 3-Run Rally in 9th Beats Tigers, 6-5

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That was quite a payday for Promoter Goldie Ahearn whose Bob Montgomery-Frankie Wills show pulled $17,932 through the gate at Griffith Stadium the other night. The fight business in Washington is all right when the fight is all right. Ahearn has learned the perfect recipe for interesting the customers.

POVICH

Washington's favorite fight dish has been apparent for some time: A good colored fighter from the upper brackets, a champion preferably, in there against a local white boy with a chance to beat him. Mixed matches draw best. Untapped for years was the fight interest of Washington's large colored populace.

When the District Boxing Commission a few years ago lifted the ban against mixed matches, it was with some trepidation. But nothing untoward has happened in dozens of fights. Joe Louis' exemplary behavior as a champion probably did more to beat down the barriers against mixed matches than any other single factor.

The District Commissioners recently acknowledged the complete success of mixed bouts by "suggesting" that the District of Columbia Boxing Commission in the future invite a colored judge to sit in on the voting. There hasn't been a loud squawk at any decision.

Montgomery, recent winner over Beau Jack, didn't impress the other night's crowd with his stature as a champion. If they expected to see a flashy fighter, they were disappointed. Montgomery isn't that. He's a smart, workmanlike boxer who starts slow and chops down his opposition in the late rounds. That's the way he beat Beau Jack.

Least of all, Montgomery didn't impress Wills despite the latter's defeat. In his dressing room after the fight, Wills was still cocky. "If that fellow is a world champion than I can be one myself," said Wills. "Look at me. I go 10 rounds with the world champ and there isn't a cut on my face. I'm not even marked up."

The weight-making business beat him, not Montgomery, Wills insists. "They made me come in at less than 145," he said. "I didn't eat for 24 hours before the afternoon of the fight. Not even a drink of water. But going into the sixth round I'm ahead of him. Then I ran out of gas."

Wills wants to fight Montgomery again, at 147 pounds. "I'd have forfeited the $500 I put up to guarantee I'd be in at less than 145 if I didn't think they'd take the money and run out on the fight. I'd be in shape to give him 10 good rounds at 147. Look at my face. I was never so skinny in my life. Feel of this," he said pointing to his ribs, "there's not enough skin on me to pinch."

Bo Bregman, Wills' manager, wasn't dismayed by what happened to his boy. "It was too much to ask," said Bregman. "We knew he wasn't strong at 144½. I'm proud of the way he fought in there. Frankie is going to beat a lot of good fighters yet, but we probably won't fool around with lightweights. We'll take on the welters and if she doesn't have to train down he'll do all right."

Wills wants to go in there with such as Henry Amstrong or Fritzie Zivic or Ray Robinson. Any such match, if it is made, can't miss a $20,000 gate in Washington. Wills made friends with the fight he made against Montgomery. All that the Washington fight fan demands is that when they bring in a champion, the local boy has a chance to win.

Wills was dangerous all the way against Montgomery. Even after the pounding he took to the body in the seventh round, he finished up the round with a fierce right hand against the champion's head. But, as he said, he ran out of gas. At 148 or 150 pounds, he could beat good fighters.

Coast Guardsman Tony Neri, who used to write fights for this newspaper, hasn't entirely divorced himself from the fight business, he writes from Norfolk.

"Last week I attended an amateur fight show in Portsmouth and acted as a second in one of the bouts. As they say in the best fight circles, 'I win the fight easy.' My boy, although green, followed my instructions to the letter and we won going away. (P. S.—My instructions from the corner were 'Stay on your feet.'"

Clary Slams Two-Bagger In 'Clutch'

Case's Looping Single Game's Pay-Off Blow; Haefner Holds Foes After Candini Fails

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Well sir, it was like this: The Nats needed two runs to tie the score in the ninth, and so they came up with three runs to beat the Tigers last night, 6 to 5, to the complete satisfaction of the 12,107 customers.

It looked sort of hopeless going into that ninth with the Tigers leading, 5 to 3. Hal Newhouser was pitching four-hit ball for Detroit and hadn't allowed a run since the fifth inning, when things started popping.

The upshot was that George Case broke up the ball game by dropping a looping single into center field for the tying and winning runs, but the blow that set the scenery for such a happy conclusion was delivered by Ellis Clary, in the role of a pinchhitter. Clary whacked an exceeding helpful two-bagger in that ninth.

Alex Kampouris called a halt to the customers' gradual move toward the exits at the start of the ninth when he beat out a single to deep short to commence the Nats' half of the inning. But the exodus was on again when Johnny Sullivan struck out.

They Stuck Around

The die-hards stuck around when Jake Early drew a base on balls to put the tying run on first and then off the bench came little Clary to pinch hit for Mickey Haefner. It was his first appearance in a game since he sprained his ankle three weeks ago, and he did all right. He skimmed a fierce two-bagger down the left field line perilously close to foul territory and Kampouris was home with Early pulling up at third.

George Myatt, a pinch runner replaced Clary at this point, and Johnny Gorsica moved to the mound for the Tigers. The count was 3 and 1 when Case lashed out. The hit he got wasn't much to look at. It was a puny pop that dropped at the feet of onrushing Centerfielder Roger Cramer and the Messrs. Early and Myatt galloped home in glee with the ball game.

It was a nice ball game to win for the Nats. They took a full-game chuck out of the Yankees' lead coincident with the Yanks' 1-0 defeat by the Browns earlier in the day, and cut the margin to 4½ games.

Candini was a floperoo. He gave up three runs to the Tigers in the first inning. One of 'em he forced home by passing Ned Harris after filling the bases on singles by Hoover and Wakefield and a walk to Higgins. With only one out Rudy York got the second and third runs home with a single to center.

Dick Wakefield banged Candini for a two-bagger to right to score Hoover, who had walked, all the way from first base, to up the Tigers' lead to 4 to 0 in the second inning.

And in the third inning the Tigers made it 5 to 0 with virtually no trouble at all. Rudy York merely banged his twelfth homer of the season far, far into the left-field seats.

Breaks Are On

But those five runs were all the Tigers ever did get after Haefner appeared on the scene. He gave up a single to Wakefield in the fifth and another to Hoover in the ninth and that was all. Stan Spence's amazing catch of Hoover's long drive to the center-field wall in the seventh didn't hurt Haefner. Nor did Sullivan's play on Wakefield in the ninth.

Newhouser was wild from the beginning, issuing seven walks, but he got out of trouble in the first inning when Gerry Priddy hit into a double play with the bases full. His defense failed him though in the third when the Nats got two gift runs.

Dick Wakefield was the culprit, in the third. After Pinch Hitter Padden walked. Case singled to left and the ball trickled through Wakefield's legs. Padden beat it home and so did Case with a magnificient sprint, and the Nats had two runs.

They got another one in the fifth after Jake Early drew a walk. He was on third with two out when Spence beat out a hit to Hoover to get him home. That made the score 5-3. In the ninth, as we were saying, the Nats made it 6-5.

Browns Beat Yankees On Error in Tenth, 1-0

Hurler Wensloff Loses Own Game Wtih Wild Throw; Sundra Victor

By the Associated Press

New York, July 21.—Charley Wensloff, the hard-luck rookie hurler of the New York Yankees, pitched five-hit ball for ten innings today but was beaten 1 to 0 by the St. Louis Browns when he made a wild throw on a bunt in the overtime frame.

This mishap halted the American League champions' eight-game winning streak and boosted the Browns into the first division.

Then Vernon Stephens opened the tenth with a scorching double against the railing in left field and Mike Chartak laid down a sacrifice bunt to the pitcher's box. Wensloff attempted to catch Stephens at third, but threw high letting Stephens score and Chartak reach second.

That proved to be the ball game, although the Yankees tried to stir up one of their familiar last-minute rallies in their final turn at bat. Frank Crosetti opened with a single and was sacrificed to second, causing Southpaw Al Hollingsworth to come to the relief of Sundra. He made the next two batters pop up.

The Yanks made nine hits, four of them by Arthur (Bud) Metheny, who had a perfect day at the plate in extending his batting streak to nine games.

Adkins Refuses To Go to Atlanta As Griff Orders

In a huff, pitcher Dewey Adkins of the Nats refused to report to the Atlanta club yesterday and said he was through with baseball.

Adkins says he tiffed with President Clark Griffith of the Nats, who said he was too green for the big leagues. "Until Mr. Griffith said that, I was willing to go to Atlanta," declared the pitcher. "How does he know whether I'm too green. They've only let me pitch 10 innings for this team all season."

Smith Limits A's to 2 Hits, Tribe Wins, 7-0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 21.—Southpaw Al Smith hurled a two-hit mound masterpiece before 3154 fans at Shibe Park today, giving the Cleveland Indians a 7-to-0 victory over the last-place Philadelphia Athletics.

Smith faced only 29 batters in registering his ninth win of the season, running the Tribe's winning streak to three games and Philadelphia's string of defeats to six.

Orville White's 37-33-70 Captures Tam O'Shanter Medal

Take Honors From Palmer By 1 Stroke

Elizabeth Hicks Wins in Women's Section With 79; Patty Berg Second

By Charles Chamberlain
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, July 21.—Under doctor's orders to play only 18 holes of golf a day, 35-year-old Orville White of Greensboro, N. C., the fellow who taught the game to Clayton Heafner, fashioned a 37-33—70 today to win the $150 medalist prize for pros qualifying for the Tam O'Shanter $10,000 Open. White, pro at the Sedgefield Country Club, Greensboro, when Heafner was a caddy, had to drop from the golf picture for seven months in 1939 because of a heart ailment. He followed the gold-rush to Tam O'Shanter "because there is only 18 holes of play a day—and that's all the doc will let me go." It's his second tourney in four years and he's determined to make a showing.

White snatched medalist honors from his North Carolina buddy, 25-year-old Johnny Palmer of Badin, who earlier in the day had managed a 36—35—71, compared with the Tam's par of 36—36, with five one-putt greens.

Donohu, Spencer Win

Jack Donohue, Georgetown University golf captain, and Wynsol Spencer, former Virginia amateur champion, came through both of their tests in the amateur division. Donohue defeated Kenneth Detwittler, Dixon, Ill., 4 and 3 and then squeezed through with a 1 up decision in the second round over Frank Orgin, Waukegan, Ill., while Spencer knocked off Frank Hayes, Chicago, 4 and 3 and then eliminated Dr. Ray Grunt, Chicago, 3 and 2.

SPAR Elizabeth Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., became medalist in the women's qualifying round with a 41-38—79, three over women's par. She was followed by Patty Berg of Minneapolis with 38-42—80, and Mrs. Opal S. Hill of Kansas City, Mo., and Georgia Taintel of Fargo, N. Dak., with a pair of 81's.

The amateur force was pared to 16 survivors with two double rounds today, and the daily double will continue until the champion is crowned Saturday. Among those advancing to the third round were medalist Bill Chambers, the "Sleepy Sailor" from Great Lakes, Ill., and Wilford Wehrle, the Racine, Wis., star whose card of 70 yesterday matched anything the pros could accomplish.

Thunderbird Beats Sharkey

Chief Thunderbird, the Vancouver Indian, defeated Babe Shorkey, via disqualification, after 22 minutes of the feature wrestling match before some 7 near-hysterical, sweltering fans at Turner's Arena last night.

However, the match proved a series of losses to all involved, and was a Phyrric victory for the Redskin, whose favorite tomahawk was swiped from his corner; Babe Sharkey lost his temper and the match, and Referee Tiny Bouque lost his shirt in a post-battle brawl with the peevish Sharkey.

Both wrestlers were tossed into the crowd upon innumerable occasions, and once the Indian succeeded in heaving both his opponent and the arbiter out simultaneously. Finally Bouque waved Sharkey to the showers. The enraged Babe pummelled the official until led back to his cell by the police.

The Mask, alias Hans Kampfer, and Dan Fraley proved a gruesome two-some until the mystery man pinned Fraley for the count. Mr. Mask stomped the prone Fraley and the referee reversed his decision.

District Tennis Star Wed at Fort Meade

Jane Thomson Jacob, youngest of Washington's tennis Jacob family, was married to Sergt. Joseph A. Poropatick at Fort Meade, Md., yesterday. Known in tennis circles as Betty, she appears here in a familiar pose. Former District playground champion, as were her brother "Happy" and her sister Camille, she played in the National Junior Girls Championship matches at Philadelphia in 1939. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey D. Jacob and graduated from Western High School.

Cronin's Pinch Single Starts Red Sox To 3-2 Win; Chicago Cops Finale, 8-6

By International News Service

Boston, July 21.—The Red Sox rallied in the eighth inning to take a 3-to-2 decision in the opener of a double-header with the Chicago White Sox today, but they fell victims to Orval Grove's ninth straight mound victory in the nightcap, 8 to 6.

Grove was replaced by Gordon Maltzberger with one out in the seventh but got credit for the win.

Tex Hughson, lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth of the opener, chalked up his tenth win when Joe Cronin, pinch-hitting, started a 3-run rally against Bill Dietrich.

The Pale Hose scored all their second game runs off Oscar Judd in the first four frames. Bobby Doerr and Jim Tabor homered for the Bosox and Doerr had eight chances during the day to extend his record string of chances accepted without an error to 335.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'The Army Play by Play' Revives a Stubborn Hope

THERE IS STILL a glimmering of hope—and I would hardly say more than that—that Washington, by some special dispensation, at some future date, may be permitted to see that symposium of five one-act plays that came out of Producer John Golden's all-soldier playwriting contest.

JOHN GOLDEN

It will be recalled that out of 115 scripts submitted, a select committee of judges chose five that were written, produced and directed by the soldier personnels of as many different Army posts scattered throughout the Nation and they were presented in New York for a single, benefit performance for the Soldiers and Sailors Club. That one performance netted $100,000 and was subsequently repeated for its most distinguished audience at Hyde Park.

The New York benefit was attended by a long list of celebrities, including high ranking officers of the Army and Navy, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia—who made speeches from the stage following the final curtain—the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and many others. All agreed with the verdict of critics next day that the plays should be presented to a wider public.

Since the story of the whole project "broke" first in this column, we were among the first to clamor for the touring of the unique troupe in the plays for which they had been solely and entirely responsible—with the aid, of course, of John Golden and the Second Service Command.

While the "touring" aspects of the business still hangs in the balance, it has been arranged for the soldier-authors-actors-directors to appear in "The Army Play by Play" for a limited engagement of two weeks, beginning August 2, in the Martin Beck Theater, New York. This engagement, too, will be under the sponsorship of the Second Service Command and Mr. Golden, but this time for the benefit of Army Emergency Relief.

With time presumably open at the National, how simple it would be to present "The Army Play by Play" in the National Capital for a week or two, following the Broadway engagement. And what business it would do!

Or is it crowding good luck to expect so much?

Well, at least, we got half the answer. Comes a letter from Lieut. Col. John R. Bedell, 2634 Lee Highway, Arlington, Va.: "Regarding your question in today's Post, 'Whatever became of El Brendel and Roscoe Ates . . .?' my son, who is an aviation cadet at Ellington Field, Tex., wrote us after his arrival at that station that Capt. Roscoe B. Ates, Air Corps, is commandant of aviation cadets there. He added that 'Captain Ates is not a bit funny, but plenty tough.' Sorry, but I have no news of El Brendel, an old favorite."

His Own Company Gets the Plum

It has just been announced that the film rights to Wendell L. Willkie's "One World," published in condensed serialization in this family journal, have been sold to Twentieth Century-Fox, for an undisclosed sum. The screen version will be produced personally by Darryl F. Zanuck, who recently was retired from active service as a colonel in the United States Army to resume his post as production chief on the T. C.-F. lot.

"One World," according to Simon & Shuster, its publishers, who made the sale, has been the fastest selling book in the history of American publishing, having attained the amazing sale figure of 1,600,000 copies since it came off the presses last April.

Mr. Willkie, by the way, is chairman of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox, so the whole thing stays in the family.

Talk about casting troubles! Remember that seagull that lit on Eddie Rickenbacker's head and supplied a little much-needed nourishment while he and his companions were floating around on that life raft in the South Pacific? Well, Winnie Sheehan is trying to get one to play the role in his forthcoming picturization of Rickenbacker's life. He has even commissioned Bennie Stilwell of Carmel, Calif., son of Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell, commander of United Nations forces in China, to help. Bennie, an incurable collector of birds, now is on the trail. But first, Sheehan had to get a State permit to catch seagulls, had to promise not to lose any and to return all of them to the place where they were caught. The scene ought to take all of a minute on the screen!

Ain't-It-the-Truth Note

Harry Traub, 2007 F Street Northwest, tips his skimmer to whoever it was invented the phrase, "All-out war." "Nowadays," says he, "all you hear when you order anything is, 'We're all out of this, we're all out of that!'"

Times Square Tattle

New York, July 21.

A startling grand jury proceeding will be instituted in Washington shortly, involving a noted former Governor, and a matter of perjury before a legislative committee . . . Justice Frank Murphy's visit to a New York hospital was for a checkup preparatory to his seeking another Army post. This decision is awaiting the return of Secretary Stimson . . . The only delay—and it may be momentary—in the resignation of Prentiss Brown is in finding a man to take over the OPA post . . . Neither Jesse Jones, Henry Wallace nor Leo T. Crowley knew of the President's decision about the Office of Economic Warfare until it was announced.

GRACE MOORE

Grace Moore is going to England . . . Howard Corcoran, the assistant United States attorney here and brother of Tom Corcoran, is slated for an Army majority . . . Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey will use, for his children, the same nurse employed for them by his divorced wife, Hannah Williams . . . Jersey politicians recognized a gubernatorial bid by Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson in the fact that his executive secretary at the Smaller War Plants Corp. is Bill Bray, disciple of and former aide to Jim Farley . . . Jack Benny, who starts his USO overseas tour this week, will entertain in as many places as possible, no matter his radio and film commitments.

William L. Shirer dined in Limerick Saturday night, had Sunday breakfast in Newfoundland, lunched in Canada, and arrived in New York Sunday evening, in time for his dinner and broadcast . . . Governor Lehman's Washington office will open a New York branch . . . Mae West may make her night club debut at the Copacabana at $10,000 a week for a two-week engagement . . . County Court Judge Nat Sobel hopes to be in uniform soon . . . Albert Lasker's interest in aviation is so intense that he spent $10,000 for the premiere dinner for the Seversky-Disney film, "Victory Through Air Power," and at the dinner Lasker couldn't find a seat for himself.

Al Jolson's agreement with Columbia Films provides that the film biography of his life is to be scrapped in the event of his disapproval of the story. As for his own participation in the movie, Jolson's sole demand is: "Let me come in at the finish and say 'Hello, folks'." . . . Eugene Loring, the ballet dancer who had the leading role in Saroyan's "Beautiful People," will direct the dances for the Billy Rose-Oscar Hammerstein show, "Carmen Jones" . . . When anyone phones the Paramount offices, the operator now answers: "For Whom the Bell Tolls—Paramount" . . . Jimmy Durante has signed for two USO shows a week at embarkation centers.

The Sullivan Shipyards prosecution probably will be disposed of with a $500 fine and an agreement to make restitution. The law fees involved are said to be more than 100 times the fine . . . Because Secretary Morgenthau has seen "Something for the Boys" three times, Producer Michael Todd presented him with a season pass . . . A British ship in port is manned by a crew whose average age is over 60. One is a former army officer who fought in the Boer War.

From Bounding Main to Dude Ranch

ELLA RAINES,

Howard Hawks' "find of the year," immediately after she had completed her first screen role in "Corvette K-225," hied herself to a dude ranch to enjoy a well-earned vacation with a few of the barn pets. Her career is being jointly sponsored by Hawks and Charles Boyer—which ought to be assurance enough of a bright future before the cameras

HEDDA HOPPER

Post Columnist's Hit

Hollywood, Calif., July 21.—Ernst Lubitsch is off to New York to confer with H. I. Phillips, who wrote "All Out, Arlene," which Lubitsch has bought. It's a best-seller about a girl in the advertising business who joins the WAACS. in other words, she's a female Pvt. Hargrove. It will be rushed into production. And what a job Rosalind Russell could do on it! . . . Otto Preminger has arranged a leave of absence this fall from Twentieth Century to do the life of Benjamin Franklin on Broadway, with Sydney Greenstreet, if Sydney can get leave from Warners. The story was written by Mary T. Hamlin. Those theater boys are just crazy to get another whiff of grease paint . . . When Alfred Hitchcock finishes "Life Boat," he'll go back to his boss, David Selznick, to do a picture with Joan Fontaine. They're hoping for another "Rebecca." Who isn't? . . . The story of the bomber "Susy-Q" cried aloud for Clark Gable, but Clark remains in the Army. On the other hand, for more than a year Jean Gabin has been talking about fighting for the French. He's turned down picture after picture. About five weeks ago, he definitely left—he said—to join the Fighting French. Now Mr. Gabin returns to act in "Passport to Dakar" for Julien Duvivier, another Frenchman.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Short Shorts

Ingrid Bergman will sing "The Last Rose of Summer" and two operatic arias in "Gaslight." . . . Billie Burke, in one generation, goes from "The Great Ziegfeld" to "The Great Gildersleeve." . . . Don Loper will soon be Army bound, but I understand his studio has put in a bid for deferment . . . Wonder why our own town doesn't give Billy Rose a chance to produce? There's a smart little hombre . . . Eddie Small is trying to persuade Booth Tarkington, who's 74, to come out and do the screen play of his book, "Kate Finnegate." . . .

One of Seven

LORRAINE MILLER,

Hollywood starlet, soon to make her screen debut in seven roles—unique, that's what it is—in United Artists' production of "Hi Diddle Diddle." The most alluring is probably the one pictured above!

Paul Whiteman will do a seventh Gershwin memorial when he finishes the picture . . . Did you hear the crack Judy Canova used on her radio show? "Hollywood," she commented,—"where men are men—and the girls all marry Chaplin."

Katie Comes Through

Emily Perkins used to work in the wardrobe department at RKO. She left that job to go with Katharine Hepburn She's been with her for years. Emily had a ruptured appendix a couple of weeks ago. Katharine sent her to the hospital in an ambulance and got the finest surgeon. She's attended by three nurses. No Hollywood star ever had better treatment, and Hepburn goes daily to cheer her up . . . It was smart of Dudley Nichols writing Lillian Castle, who's knit more than 3000 helmets for our soldiers, into "Government Girl." . . . Those people responsible for letting the Japs out of the relocation centers really did them a disservice. From Montana comes word that when a Jap enters a cafe to be served, he's booted out. So you can imagine what would happen if they should arrive on the West Coast.

Should Auld Acquaintance——

Remember sweet little Bessie Love? She's learning to be a script girl in London. They're crazy about her there. So are we. I for one would like to see her home and back on our screen . . . Anita Loos' contract with Metro expires shortly, after 13 years. Anita has a play in the back of her mind and may do that before signing up with another studio . . . Ole Olson owns a share of the ice rink at Westwood, and as soon as he can buy a tent he's going to pitch it right beside the place and put in cots, which will take care of 300 service men over weekends . . . Even though Billy Gaxton and Mae West have worked three weeks in "Tropicana," they haven't yet met. They did years ago, but Gaxton doesn't think she'll remember him. Go on now! Mae never forgets anybody.

Surprise! Surprise!

Ginger Rogers had a birthday and came home to spend it with her mother, so Lela whipped up a party, with Billy Blakewell, Florence Lake, the Eddie Foys—all the old gang. It was in full swing when in walked Jack Briggs, Ginger's husband, who'd told her he couldn't get leave . . . Jack beats Ginger at both golf and tennis—and she lo-o-o-oves it! . . . Dorothy McGuire's got herself a new beau for the moment—Capt. James Stewart. How're you, captain? I'm sure proud of you . . . Producer Bernie Fineman and Sam Coslow are looking for new berths . . . Tony Devlin (he's the 16-year-old signed for "The Raft") doesn't want his name changed to Tommy. Thinks Tony sounds more masculine . . . Frank Fay walks away with "Spotlight Scandals," but Harry Langdon did all right with the bit given him . . . Mervyn Leroy would give a lot to have Lon McCallister of "Stage Door Canteen" under personal contract to him. So would I. The boy's a natural, and he'll soon be Army-bound.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Rare Feat of Memory

Hollywood, July 21 (INS).—The last story written by Franz Werfel before he fled from Europe was a novel, "Loves and Hates of Zorah Pasha." The story behind this book, which Jack Skirball has bought for the movies, is amazing. Werfel lost the completed manuscript when he was fleeing the Nazis. Later, upon arriving in this country, the novelist and a friend, Frederick Torberg, who had read the original, reconstructed the entire version from memory! Skirball expects to start production on the story of the famous Egyptian princess before 1943 is out.

JUDITH ANDERSON

Never did Judith Anderson and Maurice Evans think they would be costarring in "Macbeth,' 'supported by an entire cast recruited from the Army! But that is exactly what takes place when Judith departs for Honolulu to join Maurice Evans, and our boys stationed there, for a camp show presentation of Shakespeare's famous drama. Captain Evans has been in Honolulu for months entertaining the boys and he cabled Judith: "You will be surprised at what actors I've found doing K. P."

One of the movie companies has grabbed Hugh Marlowe, Gertrude Lawrence's wisecracking leading man in "Lady in the Dark." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the company to tag him for a long term contract and his first assignment is with Charles Laughton and little Margaret O'Brien in Oscar Wilde's "The Canterville Ghost."

Johnny Weissmuller wants to get away from being the wild man of the jungle and become civilized. He'd like to be the hero in a Western drama and make love to some beautiful girl. Sol Lesser says he has no objection if Johnny wants to do outside pictures, but he believes fans will insist he remain true to at least one "Tarzan" picture a year. Johnny, however, wants to wear clothes before he takes them off again for "Tarzan."

The National Barn Dance, intact, will move to Hollywood. It's all Frank Freeman's idea. He likes all those home-folksy dances and songs and therefore arranged for Eddie Peabody and all the rest of the actors on the broadcast to do their stuff in the movies. It will be a musical with Walter MacEwen producing. This is the only broadcast the audience pays to hear and it has gone on for ten years, so Frank figures he will have a readymade audience for his show. Gene Autry and Alec Templeton were started on the road to fame by this same National Barn Dance program.

Mervyn Leroy had planned to take a little rest after finishing "Madame Curie," which has been a long and drawn-out affair, but he changed his mind after he had a look at Elizabeth Taylor's test. The little 11-year-old is such promising material that Mervyn has decided to direct her picture. He believes she is star material and that she will be a very famous little girl after "National Velvet" is released.

Hollywood Paging Writers Who've Been Theater

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, July 21.—Writers have to be doers to sell their product to motion picture studios nowadays.

The lush era is passing when all a writer needed was a swimming pool or beach umbrella, a bottle of Scotch and a vivid imagination. What was lush to the writer, too often was slush on the screen.

A good screen story today must carry the impact of authenticity. Writers must pen what they have lived, if they would peddle their wares to movie executives; for the latter have waxed tougher and cannier as the years have increased the boxoffice competition in this three billion-dollar industry.

Jim Knew His Stuff

James R. Young was a newspaper correspondent in Japan for 13 hard-working years. He also spent 61 days in a Japanese prison for his caustic written comments on the socalled "China incident." Jimmy Young came home at last, wrote a best-seller, "Behind the Rising Sun." The screen rights were purchased by RKO-Radio, and the finished picture soon will be released.

Jimmy Young's book was bought by the movies, not because it was a best-seller but because it told the truth about Japan in grim, compelling fashion; because the author knew what he was writing about, had lived his own story.

Robert Ardrey was assigned to write the script for the Frank Ross production, "A Lady Takes a Chance," story of the romantic adventures of film Stars Jean Arthur and John Wayne during a bus journey across the nation. Ardrey didn't draw on his flexible imagination; he made two transcontinental bus journeys before he put paper in his typewriter.

Studied Capital First-Hand

Adela Rogers St. John recently sold "Government Girl" to RKO-Radio as a starring vehicle for Olivia De Havilland and Sonny Tufts. But before she wrote the story, Miss St. John went to Washington and remained there many weeks living with and learning the problems of girls in Government service.

"I Walked With a Zombie" was one of the boxoffice successes scored by those two chill-masters, Producer Val Lewton and Director Jacques Tourneur. It was good because it was based on articles written by Inez Wallace, Cleveland newspaper woman, after some rather horrfying experiences in Haiti.

At the moment, Scenarist Joseph Quillan is working on the script of "Show Business," which Eddie Cantor will produce and in which he also will appear. It's the history of vaudeville and entertainment business in America from the turn of the century to the heyday of the Ziegfield "Follies." Scenarist Quillan is working with Cantor right at his elbow, the latter contributing to the screen play of a wealth of truth from his long experience.

Lost Fortune Geting Facts

Ernest Hemingway was in Spain during the revolution. He lost a fortune there, trying to aid the Loyalist cause. But Hemingway made a new fortune when he sat down later and wrote, from his own grim knowledge, "For Whom the Bell Tolls"—and sold the screen rights of the book to Paramount.

The same studio also is filming "Hostages," which Stefan Heym wrote after he and his father had suffered under Nazi terrorism in Czecho-Slovakia.

Marion Hargrove, a buck private in the United States Army, wrote a series of articles for his hometown papers at $2 an article. Humorous and true, they were printed in book form under the title, "See Here, Private Hargrove." Metro bought the book and now Private Hargrove's wallet is fatter than that of a Brigadier-General.

"Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," by Capt. Ted Lawson; "Guadalcanal Diary," by Richard Tregaskis and countless other recent purchases offer the same advice to authors to wit:

Live a rich life and you'll live to get rich.

Hungry Ones Cast

Cast in "Meet the People" as hungary shipyard workers in a boarding house with Lucille Ball and Dick Powell as star guests, were Bill Engle, Eugene King, Gertrude Bennett, Margaret Burt, Frank Adams, Julian Smith and Sydney Troy. Charles Riesner is directing.

Inventor Asks U. S. to Pay Him $100,000 for Radar Patent

Uncle Sam was billed for $100,000 yesterday by the man who claims to be the inventor of radar.

The claimant is F. S. Chapman of Kenton, Ohio, now in Washington, who says he was granted a patent in 1919, reissued in 1930.

Chapman in a letter to Attorney General Francis Biddle said, "This is the radar patent."

Radar, described by the Army and Navy as one of the marvels made possible by the electron tube, is considered to be the outstanding scientific development to come out of the war thus far.

Ultra high-frequency waves traveling with the speed of light are focused to scan the air and sea. When they strike an enemy ship or airplane they bounce back.

In England it was claimed earlier this year that the British scientist Sir Robert Watson Watts, discovered radio location accidently.

April 25 the Army and Navy, ignoring the claim, said in a statement:

"It (radar) was first discovered in the United States in 1922, when scientist obsented that reception from a radio station was interfered with by an object moving in the path of the signals."

Chapman told the Washington Post he discovered the radar principle while serving as a telegrapher for the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad at Massillon, Ohio, many years ago."

"Later" he said, " I furnished the plan to Admiral W. S. Benson, chief of naval operations in 1917-18."

In his letter to Attorney General Biddle, Chapman said: ". . . It should be well over $100,000 in value and so, to save time of tabulators who should be on war work, it would seem to be okay to pay $100,000 now and the remainder later."

Chapman said about Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor and Leo C. Young of the Naval Research Labratory, "They have done a good job developing it, but they did not discover it."

Not In His Contract

Abilene, Tex.—A fireman ran screaming from the burning home of Police Capt. Virgil Waldrop.

The fireman said he'd been creeping through the residence on all fours—and he ran smack into a gaping-mouth bear.

Mrs. Waldrop is a taxidermist.

San Quentin Politeness

San Quentin, Calif.—San Quentin prison workers, turning out ration books for 8,000,000 Californians, thought of everything.

One applicant, sending in blanks for herself and her husband, added a note: "Baby expected in July." On the father's book the convict wrote: "Congratulations."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Search Fails to Find 'Callow Collegiates'

I spent yesterday looking for the "callow collegiates" which Representative Ramspeck of Georgia found so numerous in "top-flight personnel jobs." The Georgian said the callow youngsters had acquired a lust for great power and they had set out on a rampage of wide-scale hiring of their fraternity brothers and thus established cliques which he viewed as a "dangerous trend." The Congressman also jumped on the Civil Service Commission for "overemphasizing the importance of college degrees" in selecting personnel officers. Ramspeck has a staff of investigators helping him and I'd like to see the facts they dug up to support such sweeping indictments. Frankly, it can't be done. The record won't back up the charges and here's the record:

KLUTTZ

STATE: John Ross, 39, personnel director. Yale graduate. About a dozen years of Government experience behind him. TREASURY: Ted Wilson started in Government as a low-paid clerk and worked himself up the hard way. He's a Word War I vet and he's at least 45. Interior: Mrs. Atwood Maulding is 48 and she entered Federal service years ago as a lowly clerk. AGRICULTURE: T. Roy Reid is another career man. He has 25 years Federal service back of him. Moreover, he didn't have a day of personnel experience when he was appointed to the job, but he has spent years working with and understanding people. Reid has a couple of college degrees but he has been working hard to overcome them.

LABOR: Robert Smith, 39, is the man. He has been at Labor about eight years and he did personnel work for Farm Credit. He attended Washington and Lee.

COMMERCE: Oliver Short, 60, is the next "callow collegian." He headed the Maryland personnel department for 12 years before he joined the Federal service.

JUSTICE: Clive Palmer is over 40 and he has been around for a long time.

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT: Frank H. Ellis is one of the best examples of a career man. He started at the bottom and after about 35 years in all sorts of jobs he's now personnel director.

NAVY: Charles Piozet is another fine example. He's 52 and he started in Navy as a messenger. In World War I he was one of the secretaries to Assistant Navy Secretary Franklin D. Roosevelt.

WAR: William Kushnick is a graduate engineer and he has an industrial background. He was dry behind his ears years ago. James Mitchell, personnel officer of Army Service Forces, is another top-flight man with an industrial background, Western Electric. He doesn't possess a college degree and he's in his forties. Working under him are at least half a dozen colonels and scads of smaller officer fry. In fact, most personnel people in the War Department have had industrial backgrounds and a look at the companies they've been connected with appears to be a roster of the National Association of Manufacturers. Navy, too, has commissioned a good many personnel men from private concerns. A greater number have had experience in the Federal service. But very few in either department could be classified as "callow collegians."

WAR PRODUCTION: Carl Hayward, who didn't even finish high school, is the boss and he's a good one. He's in his 50's and he worked himself up to a big-time job with Pennsylvania Railroad before he entered Federal service. OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION: Kenneth Warner is in his 40's. He was personnel director of the State of Arkansas and he had other personnel experience. But he was formerly a college prof. and he did go to college. INTERSTATE COMMERCE: John Switzer is in his 60's and he's another outstanding example of career man, having started in the service as a messenger. GENERAL ACCOUNTING: Ray Ballinger, 52, is another former clerk who gradually worked up to a big-time personnel job after years of service.

VETERANS: George Sweet is a grandfather. He pulled himself up by his bootstraps during his long years of service. FEDERAL WORKS: A. J. Sarre is in his 50's and he went to the same college in Georgia with Dillard Lassiter, chief Ramspeck investigator. He has an industrial background. RFC: Frank Elliott's school days are in the dark background. SELECTIVE SERVICE: Col. George A. Bonnett started in as a clerk in the Civil Service Commission many years ago. FEDERAL SECURITY: Arthur B. McLean is in his 50's and he has been around for a long time. CENSORSHIP: James McNeil is in his 40's and he's a former congressional secretary and Civil Service employe. NLRB: Don Bent started his career as a Civil Service Clerk in 1933 and worked up. He's in the smaller and younger group.

D. C. Asked To Sanction Day Nursery

Randolph Urges Consideration of Request to Use Banned Building

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Possibility that District red tape may prevent conversion of a two-story frame building into a nursery school at Naylor Gardens, big Defense Homes Corp. apartment project in Southeast Washington, brought prompt action yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee.

Randolph outlined the situation in a letter to the District Commissioners, suggesting the Naylor Gardens request should receive careful consideration.

The situation developed over a request from Edward M. Blanchard, property manager for the development, that the building department permits a temporary wooden frame building to be used as a nursery school for the children of war-working mothers.

Removal Ordered

The Building Inspector's Office informed Blanchard that under District regulations Naylor Gardens would have to remove the building, first because it extended 12 feet over the building line, although it is many feet from Naylor Road, and second, because it was built under a temporary permit.

Naylor Gardens management offered to spend $4000 getting the building, which has been used as a contractor's office, in shape for a nursery school. The building, 60 by 30 feet, has 12 rooms, with ample place for afternoon naps for the children. Plans have been made for complete fencing so that children cannot stray into the road.

Blanchard pointed out in a letter to Randolph that already 60 mothers had applied for such a school, and that 100 more were expected to place their children there. Naylor Gardens, reserved for in-migrant warworkers, has 748 apartments which will house 3000 persons when all are occupied.

Special Permit Asked

Blanchard has asked that the District allow a non-conforming occupancy permit for the building until after the war.

The management expects if this is allowed that the nursery school will be operated either under the present District nursery school system, or by an organization like the District Red Cross or the American Women's Voluntary Services. The AWVS is now operating the nursery school at McLean Gardens, another Defense Homes Corp. project.

In his letter to the District Commissioners Randolph said that the management will remodel the building and install an adequate heating system, lavatories, and a modern kitchen.

Floats to Show Defense Work In Procession

Tableaux showing civilian defense units in action during an air raid will be carried on floats in the civilian defense anniversary parade July 30, the chiefs of services announced yesterday.

Some 8000 persons, including 5000 wardens and 1500 auxiliary police, will participate in the procession, which will start at 6:15 p. m. at Third Street and Constitution Avenue and climax in ceremonies in front of the District Building at 7:45.

President Roosevelt yesterday congratulated the Commissioners on their efforts to stimulate interest in the civilian defense organization in the following letter:

Dear Commissioner Young:

I am glad to learn that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are alert to the necessity for maintaining the Civilian Defense forces of the Nation's Capital at full strength of 70,000.

It is, perhaps, not surprising that the civilian volunteers enrolled in the protective Civilian Defense services have dropped from the requisite 70,000 to a mere 48,000. Washington, however, must set a good example to the rest of the Nation, and we must not be lulled into complacency and inaction because of the series of brilliant victories which we have achieved. Now as always, eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

Our responsibility is enhanced by the consideration that nearby counties in Maryland and Virginia are included in the Washington area for purposes of civilian defense. We must not relax our efforts anywhere in the field of home defense until our enemies have been brought to their knees in unconditional surrender.

I wish you as honorary chairman, and all who are working with you, the success which your high purpose merits. Very sincerely yours, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The third anniversary membership drive will conclude with a mass demonstration of defense activities to be staged at Griffith Stadium August 11.

50 Drivers and Pedestrians Rewarded for Traffic Caution

Miss Ada Leonard of the Capital Theater and Maury Young issue a Junior Board of Commerce Safety Ticket to L. E. Godfrey of 5629 Kansas Avenue for safe driving.

The Junior Board of Commerce's "Smash the Seventh Column" program for accident prevention here was marked yesterday by the issuance of free theater tickets to pedestrians and automobile drivers who, under direct observation, heeded traffic regulations.

Giving out the tickets, good for this week's show at the Loew's Palace, were the Duncan Sisters, Rosita and Vivian, and Ada Leonard, who are appearing currently on the Loew's Capitol stage. At the Palace will be shown the Pete Smith specialty, "Seventh Column."

The Duncan Sisters were posted at the corner of Seventh and F Streets Northwest, while Miss Leonard was at Thirteenth and F Streets Northwest. Fifty free tickets in all were distributed to the pedestrians and auto drivers who were stopped by traffic policemen when they showed signs of being aware of the lights, safety zones and other traffic considerations.

By and large, those who were stopped and given the tickets were not too shocked. A few thought for a moment they were being given traffic tickets.

Today will be "Household Safety" day and the Junior Board will hold a Dutch Treat luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel which will be attended by heads of various women's organizations here. Tomorrow will be "Children's Day" and 100 playgrounds will present short skits on safety. Also, a special detail of police will assist members of the School Boy Patrol in the distribution of "Walk Warily" booklets to pedestrains on F Street.

Victory Sidelights

District Pharmacists Raising Fund to Buy Ambulance

War bond funds for an ambulance plane of the C3 type are being raised by the District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association in hopes that it may be the first group in the Nation to sponsor purchase of such a plane.

The C3 is a new model, used to bring back wounded from the North African front to Miami in 57 hours, and local pharmacists are now well along toward their goal of raising the $110,000 that will put "Miss RX" on the nose of a C3 plane.

"RX" is the symbol appearing on doctor's prescription blanks which means "recipe" to the pharmacist and has existed for nearly 2000 years as the sign of Jupiter.

Local druggists have been selling war stamps right along, Paul Reznek, chairman of the plane drive committee, said yesterday; but now they are making an even greater effort to encourage the filling of stampbooks and buying of bonds.

The campaign began, coincidentally, on the date of the invasion of Sicily, and will close August 10.

In Dad's Footsteps

Miss Eugenia LeJeune, daughter of the late Lieut. Gen. John A. LeJeune, former commandant of the Marine Corps, will be sworn into her father's branch of the service today at 10:30 a. m. at the Navy Annex in Arlington, Va. The new Marine Corps base at New River, N. C., has been named in honor of her father.

July Jalopy-Junking

Mr. Motorist: You can't help but feel sentimental about that old car you enjoyed so much, but you can help your Government—really hlep. Junk that jalopy in July by donating the old "bus" to the salvage committee's jalopy-junking round-up. That scrap metal surely is needed and all you have to do is call the Salvage Committee, Republic 8488, or the Police Department and they will take care of the details.

Book 3 Task Progresses

Fifty-five thousand of the District's 400,000 War Ration Books No. 3 still must be processed and probably will be in the hands of local residents by Monday morning, the Dstrict Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

But because no date has been set for their use and no commodities indicated, those who do not receive their ration books should not become alarmed, OPA warned. And furthermore, it was emphasized, they should not phone or white to either OPA headquarters or the mailing center now. Adjustments will be made after August 1.

City News in Brief

A total of 2189 applications for vacation travel permits on A-card gasoline have been approved by 15 local ration boards, the District Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

Board 30, at Sixteenth and Lamont Streets Northwest, and Board 31, at Thirteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, deadlocked at the head of the list as each approved 243 applications. Board 21 at Twenty-ninth and Calvert Streets Northwest was close behind with 234.

WLB Gets Local Case

The Department of Labor Conciliation Service yesterday certified to the National War Labor Board the wage dispute between the S. Kann Sons Co., Eighth Street and Market Space Northwest, Washington, and the Warehouse Employes Local No. 730.

The union is asking for a 45-hour week with a pay increase of $2.50, while the company agrees to the $2.50 raise but wants a 48-hour week.

Burns Prove Fatal

Andrew Lyles, 43, Negro, of 354 Dixon Court Southwest, died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital from burns suffered at his home July 5 when coal oil was poured over him and ignited. His common law wife, Miss Susie Haines, 50, Negro, who was arrested July 5 and charged with mayhem in connection with the affair, will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Larceny Conviction

Esther Anderson, 28, Negro waitress at the Interstate Commerce Commission cafeteria, was convicted yesterday in District Court of larceny on March 23, of a pocketbook containing $140 which belonged to a stenographer there. Justice David Pine heard the case and evidence was presented by Assistant United States Attorney John L. Ingoldsby.

Hotel Man Admits Disorder Charge; Given Jail Term

Samuel Ishkanian, 53, owner of the New York Hotel, 612 F Street Northwest, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $500 yesterday by Municipal Court Judge Hobart Newman after pleading guilty to a charge of operating a disorderly house.

Three other defendants, Jack Magrell, 56, night clerk; Bill Hill, 38, relief night clerk, and Alfred Austin, janitor, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial.

Ishkanian's plea for leniency because of poor health was opposed by Assistant United States Attorney John B. Diamond who told the court: "Only by meting out heavy sentences to offenders can we control the rising venereal disease rate in Washington."

Huff Against Plan to Help Inebriates

Special Facilities Not Needed, Says Welfare Director; Churchman Dissents

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

Sharp issue was taken yesterday with Director of Welfare Ray L. Huff's statement that it was not necessary to construct special facilities for the care of chronic inebriates in the District.

The response was made by Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the Committee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, who earlier in the week had termed the District's method for caring for inebriates "cruel and inhuman."

LaRoe had recommended that one of the first District projects to be undertaken during the postwar period should be the establishment of an inebriate farm which would be based on the same plan as is in operation in several Western States.

In answer to LaRoe's suggestion, Huff stated:

"I am not aware of any persuasive evidence that Inebriate Farms have ever been in existence where they were conducted in a way that would satisfy the standards of the problem. . ."

Huff suggested that persons who are now looking for assistance in the problem can receive it, in part, from Gallinger Hospital in the casework services and also through the Family Service Society here. He also suggested private physicians and institutions.

Answering LaRoe's earlier estimate that the District could profitably expend $250,000 in constructing facilities for the rehabilitation of inebriates, Huff said:

"I think it would be most unwise to become involved in any large expenditure of public funds for a specialized service for alcoholics until we can be sure it is more than an experiment.

"There are a great number of people whom we receive in the workhouse as alcoholics who have not the slightest interest in becoming cured of alcoholism . . ."

Huff also pointed out that at the present time District legislation would not permit care of an alcoholic person who chooses voluntarily to submit himself to an alcoholic rationing program.

La Roe, in rebuttal, said the major problem will never be solved if the chief emphasis is on the saving of money. He said legislation should be sought to provide the necessary funds for a District institution exclusively for the rehabilitation of inebriates.

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson was confronted with a material example of the controversy yesterday when Defense Attorney J. Robert Esher, representing a man convicted 18 times of drunkenness, told the court:

"Neither you nor any other judge has helped drunks by sending them to jail. This man is proof of sending a chronic alcoholic to jail will not help either him or society."

To the attorney's plea Judge Neilson answered:

Abortion Case Hearing Set For Today

The District Court trial of Edna Gray, 61, Negro, accused of performing an abortion on a 26-year-old girl, is scheduled to be heard at 10 a. m. today before Justice David Pine.

It was learned yesterday, however, that the defense probably will ask for a continuance of the case until a later date. Questioned concerning this, United States Attorney Edward M. Curran said that his office was ready to bring the case to trial immediately.

According to court records, Mrs. Gray since 1919 has been charged 13 times with performing illegal operations. She was twice convicted and sentenced to serve from two to seven and a half years in jail. She is under $10,000 bond now awaiting grand jury action on a charge of performing another abortion on a 22-year-old Government employe who is now recovering in Gallinger Hospital from infection allegedly resulting from the operation.

A check-up of hospitals here revealed the following: Twelve women are recovering in Gallinger Hospital from the effects of illegal operations performed elsewhere; three hospitals refused to give out figures on patients of this type, and three hospitals reported they had no patients who were recovering from illegal operations.

Seaman Wants Sixth Trip

John Nordhoust, 25, of 5424 Western Avenue Northwest, who lost the sight of one eye doing Red Cross rescue work in the Ohio Valley flood of 1937, today will report to the merchant marine for his sixth trip on a United States merchant ship, despite his limited vision.

Martha Lipton to Sing at Two Of Post Starlight Concerts

Joins Thibault; Her Career Typical Success Story

Martha Lipton, dark-eyed young contralto whose rich voice has received acclaim from critics throughout the country, typifies an all-American success story in which a native New Yorker rises from obscurity to the concert stage.

Miss Lipton will sing with Conrad Thibault, radio star, Saturday and Sunday nights in The Post series of Starlight Concerts at Merician Hill Park. The program will include many popular songs.

Taught music at an early age by her mother, she had acquired a repertoire of concert songs and operatic arias before she was 7 years old. However, her greatest encouragement to become a professional concert singer came one summer when she was a teen-age girl at camp.

Seated around a campfire, she joined the group in singing well-known favorites. When other voices dwindled, Martha Lipton continued in a solo which delighted and astonished her friends. All of them insisted that she plan for a concert stage career.

Difficult Climb

Although the singer's mother thought the girl should learn romantic roles, they finally decided that she should stick to songs most appropriate for her husky contralto voice. Her climb to success was so difficult that it was necessary for her to work during the day and study at night. Occasionally she sang at social functions.

Finally Martha Lipton decided to leave her job and devote all her time to singing. She won a scholarship to the Juilliard Graduate School which opened the way upward for the ambitious young contralto. Competing last year with 77 other candidates, she won an award from the MacDowell Club which entitled her to a New York concert and constituted her first official recital.

Then she started in radio broadcasts, appearing with the Radio City Opera of the Air and with

MARTHA LIPTON

Walter Damrosch's "Magic Key" program. In May, she won a $1000 award in the Young Artists' Contests sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Recently, Miss Lipton has appeared as a soloist with New Friends of Music in Brahms songs; made a tour of the South with the Federation of Music Clubs; filled two engagements with the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra, and appeared with the Portland Symphony, the Bridgeport Symphony, the Norfolk Symphony and the Pittsburgh Symphony.

Chosen by Dr. Fritz Busch, the famed conductor, to sing Dorabella in his performance of Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" with the New Opera Company in New York in the spring, she learned the part on a scant two-week notice. She was the only member of the company who sang three roles in as many operas: Tschaikowsky's "Pique Dame," Verdi's "Macbeth" and the Mozart opera.

Tickets for the Starlight Concerts may be obtained at Cappel Concert Bureau, 1340 G Street Northwest, and the park boxoffice for 55 cents, 1.10 and $1.65.

8000 Welcome Kindler Back; Dorothy Maynor Well Received

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the sixteenth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night. Soloist: Dorothy Maynor. Program: Carnival Overture, Op. 92 (Dvorak), Symphony No. 4 in A major, Op. 90 (Mendelssohn), Reflections on the River (Norden), The Lee Rigg (Goldman), Waltz of the Flowers (Chaikovski), Fountain Scene from "Boris Godunov" (Musorgski-Kindler), Soprano solos: "Pace, pace, mio Dio" (Verdi), "Depuis le jour" (Charpentier), "Ave Maria" (Schubert), "Dedication" (Richard Strauss), "Ah Love But A Day" (Amy Beach).

An audience of 8000 welcomed Hans Kindler home to the Potomac Watergate last evening when he conducted the National Symphony Orchestra in the sixteenth summer concert, and extended a very cordial reception to Dorothy Maynor, the soloist of the occasion. Had temperature and humidity been less oppressive, one surmises that attendance would have been larger, for there was a festive air along the crowded river terrace and the applause had a happy sound. The orchestral players seemed relieved at the return of their perennial director after the long interregnum of guest batonists, and their performance had sparkle and zest.

BROWN

Festivity was the keynote of the first work on the program, Dvorak's "Carnival Overture," which has an effervescent gaiety interrupted only for a short time by the rather languishing sentiment of the middle episode. Probably its joyous character accounts for the fact that it has long been separated from the two companion overtures which the composer intended to be performed as a triptych. Inasmuch as a work cannot be judged by one of its parts, one hopes that Doctor Kindler will some day direct the three overtures consecutively.

The major composition performed also was amiable, for it was Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony, which is virtually a musical travelogue by a composer who was always ready to see the best in everything. On his visit to Italy in 1830 he must have witnessed some scenes that were not completely agreeable, but the symphony is a report of sunny skies, ebullient temperaments, and merrymaking. Even the second movement, with its suggestion of penitential processions, is not deeply shadowed with emotion.

Between the overture and the symphony, Dorothy Maynor sang Leonora's familiar supplication from the last act of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," and as an encore "Depuis le jour" from Charpentier's "Louise." One of the most remarkable sopranos of our day, she has a securely controlled voice which is equally effective in the richness of the lower register and the clear sonority of the high notes. Her natural endowment of tone has been excellently trained in attack and in plasticity of phrasing. In a second appearance she offered Schubert's "Ave Maria," Richard Strauss' "Dedication" and Amy Beach's "Ah Love, But A Day."

For the second half of the program Dr. Kindler reserved the premiere of "Reflection on the River" by Norris Lindsay Norden, the Philadelphia organist, choral conductor and composer. No more appropriate place could have been found for the first performance of this tone-poem, for the listener had reflections of lights and wooded hills spread upon the rippled Potomac. This neatly scored piece is impressionistic in style without any borrowings from Debussy, reflective in emotional content and melodically engaging.

Another novelty was Richard Franko Goldman's jolly arrangement of the old American fiddle tune, "The Lee Rigg," which danced along with an infectious rhythmic prance. Other items on the program were Chaikovski's "Waltz of the Flowers" and Dr. Kindler's enjoyable arrangement of the duet between Dmitri and Marina in the third act of Musorgski's "Boris Godunov."

Starlight Concert

C. C. Cappel, in cooperation with the National Capital Park Service, presents the Curtis String Quartet (Jascha Brodski, Charles Jaffe, Max Aronov and Orlando Cole) in Meridian Hill Park on Wednesday night. Assisting artist: Miksa Merson, piano. Program: Quartet in D minor (Schubert), Two Indian Sketches (Griffes), Quintet in F minor (Franck).

Appearing in the fourth Starlight Chamber Music Concert in Meridian Hill Park last evening, the Curtis String Quartet was hospitably received by an audience of 1500 who enjoyed a program that departed little from the standard repertoire. The departure was the two Indian sketches, "Farewell Song" and "War Dance," by the lamented American composer, Charles Griffes. These sketches, possibly intended as material to be worked into a complete quartet, show an appreciation of the idiom and a feeling for its melodic potentialities.

The program opened with Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" quartet which went its familiar way in a performance lyrically phrased and emotionally charged. After the Griffes pieces the visitors added, as an acknowledgment of persistent applause, Charles Jaffe's transcription of a piano piece from Darius Milhaud's "Saudades do Bresil," an interesting dance done in polytonal harmonies.

Miksa Merson, resident pianist, joined the quartet in an excellent reading of Franck's piano quintet, which is one of the masterpieces in that genre. The performance was vigorous, sound and animated by a consistent care for the spiritual quality of the music.

Restaurant Cleanup Embroils 3

Health Chiefs See Little Progress in Campaign for Cleanliness

Two more restaurant operators were fined and another forfeited collateral in Municipal Court yesterday on charges of permitting insanitary conditions as District health officials indicated that the drive to clean up the city's food establishments as yet has produced no tangible results.

David Yager, restaurateur at 5540½ Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was fined $25 by Judge George D. Neilson. Yager was charged with selling food in an establishment where there were exposed food and food containers, many flies, floors worn and dirty, kitchen walls and ceiling dirty and in need of repairs, soiled clothing and shoes in the kitchen, dirty toilet and toilet door broken.

Unsterilized Glasses

George Koroneos, restaurant operator at 2750 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was fined $20 on a charge of using drinking utensils which were not thoroughly cleansed and sterilized at the time of service to the public.

Gray P. Ransom, operator of a restaurant at 201 Maryland Avenue Northeast, forfeited $25 when he faile dto appear to answer a charge of using non-sterilized drinking utensils.

This brought the number of food handlers paying for uncleanliness to 45 for the month, but Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Director, described the stream of summonses his investigators swear out as "still steady."

He issued a warning to "certain groups of restaurant operators who consistently ignore effective dish-washing techniques taught in our weekly lectures," and as a result continue to maintain insanitary establishments.

Majority Are Clean

Dr. Ruhland, while condemning those restaurateurs who are responsible for the dangerous condition which filth in food establishments has brought about, said that the majority of restaurants are clean despite difficulty of obtaining sterilizing machinery and despite the labor shortage. This he said resulted because "they abide by the scientific methods we teach."

These methods are expounded in weekly educational lectures every Friday afternoon in the New Municipal Building and are supervised by Dr. R. R. Ashworth of the Food Inspection Department. Dr. Ruhland praised Ashworth for his work in attempting to alleviate the filth problem.

Women to Aid Restaurant Price Freeze

The District Office of Price Administration expects to enlist the aid of women volunteers to check compliance of Washington restaurants with the price freez which becomes effective Monday, it was learned yesterday.

Plans for the proposed setup are not yet under way, a spokesman said, but they may be expected as a natural consequence of the part volunteers have played in assisting in obtaining adherence to such regulations as the canned foods price ceilings in grocery stores.

At present, the price division of the District OPA is preparing to obtain the help of several hundred women volunteers to check filing of the April 4-10 menus by Washington restaurants and other eating places.

Proprietors were asked to turn in "typical" menus for that period to the local boards. Some 20 to 25 per cent have not yet done so. The volunteers will assist regular OPA clerks to phone, write and visit them, requesting compliance.

Visits by volunteers to eating places to check adherence to the menu price freeze order will have nothing in the nature of coercion, the spokesman emphasized.

"Their function will be not to snoop, but to assist and educate proprietors in understanding the regulation," he declared.

When price ceilings on canned and processed foods were first instituted, he pointed out, there was confusion on details of the order. Volunteers who visited shopkeepers often helped them correct oversights and inadvertent violations, he said.

Only two requests for information were received yesterday from restaurateurs, a District OPA official said. Questions concerning the freeze regulation will be discussed at length toward the end of next week, when Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, and other representatives will meet with OPA officials.

Young Wife Says the Older Generation Can Make No Greater Contribution to National Morale in War-Time Than to Shelter Families of Service Men

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: There was one important point that nobody mentioned in the recent discussion of the advisability of a young wife's going back to live with her parents while her husband is away at war. That point is,—In case of sickness, the protection offered by her parents' home may mean the difference between life and death. There was a pathetic story in the New York newspapers recently, about a young wife who died unattended in her room. And by the time the tragedy was discovered, a week later, her baby had starved to death. The husband was in an army camp in the South. Had the young wife been living with relatives, that double tragedy would not have occurred.

What better contribution can the older generation make, than to furnish protection and security to the wives and children of men in the armed forces? Are the lives and homes of the older generation to be completely undisturbed by the fierce storms of war,—while the younger generation bears the whole burden and makes every sacrifice? It seems to me that cooperative sharing of hardship makes a healthier condition for the whole community. For instance, take the case of "Duration Widow," whose letter you published July 13. Although completely independent, financially, she chose to live with her parents after her husband went overseas; and by that arrangement, she is able to work as a Volunteer Nurses' Aide, without denying her 2-year-old child the advantages of a normal home life. And while you raised the objection that this pleasant personal arrangement is contrived at the expense of curtailing her mother's freedom of action, I should think the grandmother would be only too happy to make that small sacrifice for the general good.

Men Worry Less When Wives "Go Back Home"

In our case, my husband, our children and myself had been living in a Washington suburb for several years before war broke. Then my husband was transferred to a branch of Government service which wanted him to go overseas on a special mission for about two years,—to do work of a non-military nature. It was my idea that the children ard I could stay on in our Washington home during his absence. But my husband objected to this arrangement. He said if he left us alone there, he would worry so much that he couldn't do effective work in the foreign field. He argued that in case of illness, we might not be able to get a doctor or a nurse; and asked what would happen to the children if I got sick. He insisted that I ask my parents if we might stay with them. My parents have a large home in a Northern State,—from whence this letter comes; as you can see from the postmark. Moreover, they are unusually kindly Christian people; and when the proposition was put to them, they readily took us in.

My father frankly says that he feels he is making a real contribution to the war effort in giving my husband peace of mind to do valuable work. And I feel, furthermore, that I am helping in still another way, by getting away from war-crowded Washington and leasing my home to a family man whose war work obliges him to live there. Like "Duration Widow," I am financially independent of my parents; and perhaps you will say,—as you did to her,—that this fortunate fact makes me another exception to the general rule, and explains why we find our two-family household arrangement highly satisfactory. But I feel, on the other hand, that the greater the need, on the part of the service man's wife and children, the greater is the moral responsibility of the older generation to come to the rescue in a generous spirit. To repeat: What better contribution can they make to the war effort, than to give peace of mind to a man at the front, by guaranteeing shelter and care to his wife and babies while he fights the war? Incidentally, since leaving Washington a few months ago, I have continued my subscription to The Washington Post, mainly because I consider your column so valuable. M. E. D.

This Grandmother Loves Having Her Girls Back

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been interested in the controversy about "duration widows,"—as to whether or not it is advisable for them to return to live with their parents, after their husbands go to war. As I have two young married daughters who have come home to stay, while their husbands are overseas, I can speak from experience in stating the older generation's point of view.

What kind of parents would we be, if we did not want to take them in and help tide them over this emergency? In war-crowded Washington, people are being asked to open their homes to newcomers,—and rent out rooms as a patriotic duty. Why not a similar campaign to persuade selfish oldsters to do at least as much for their own families? It seems to me bad enough for a young wife to have her husband away at war, and in danger of death, without having to live alone with her babies,—completely tied down with no one to help her. It would be a very dreary and demoralizing existence.

With us, it has been a mutually agreeable experience to be together; and my husband and I are greatly enjoying having a two-months-old grandson in the house. As for the financial end of it,—in case a daughter is not financially independent, all the more reason why she shouldn't try to carry on alone. Then, more than ever, it seems to me, she ought to join forces with her family. Blood is thicker than water; and if one has any sense of family loyalty, one should consider it both a duty and a joy to make life as pleasant as possible for the married daughters who have to be such good sports while their homes are disrupted "for the duration." J. W. C.

She Votes in Favor Of "Life With Parents"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I agree with "Duration Widow's" sentiments, published July 13,—who decided to return to her parents after her husband went overseas, in order to give her small child a normal home environment; and who says the plan has been very rewarding. I, too, am a "war widow;" and even though my husband is still in this country, my baby and I are living with my parents.

In the first place, I wouldn't think of taking an infant about the country, as his father is transferred from place to place. It wouldn't be healthful for the baby. In the second place, I couldn't afford to live on the $62 monthly I am allotted; which leaves no choice but to "go home to mother" or find a job for myself; and mother is the only person besides myself whom I would trust to look after my son. In the third place, I was very happy at home before marriage; so, naturally, that is my first choice of place to be, until my husband's return. And, fourthly, both my parents have had a new interest in life, and say they feel younger, since the baby and I came to live with them. D. W. H.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There are innumerable ways in which a baby lures sleep, many of which are disagreeable to us.

He may have been a tremendously good sleeper and then, when he reaches the runabout years, for no apparent reason he begins to roll or bump his head, or kneel in his crib and rock back and forth (sending it skidding over the floor). Or he may pull out his hair in chunks. All these may be premliminary to sleep.

Usually the mother will find these habits spring up sometime between the tenth and the twenty-fourth month. Always they drive the parent frantic. Crib-rocking is noisy and no one can sleep when the crib is traveling around. The parents worry because the child is making herself bald-headed or knocking herself senseless against the bedroom wall—these habits seem so utterly idiotic. How could any child enjoy such minor torture.

Such habits possibly are indicative of some strains to which the child is victim. The child may be so submissive the parents increase their demands until the child no longer is a personality, merely a parental toy. The child may be rebellious and the mother so determined on discipline she clamps down harder and harder until the child is hard put to do anything his own way.

It becomes the parental goal to subdue him at any cost. The ability to go to sleep in the old, quiet way is shattered by these inner tensions which spring up at the moment the child is supposed to relax.

Growth itself is a strain, and the child's inevitable conflicts with his parents, his companions, the environment itself (which opposes him) are reflected by the child's behavior when he is alone.

There are a few simple things one may do. Or, one may do nothing, on the assumption that if strains are eased up, and the child grows normally, that inevitably the habits will be abandoned

Just because it helps a parents to do something, she may advance the bedtime so the child is sleepier at bedtime and less inclined to any soothing rites. His crib may be changed to a full-sized bed, or the crib sides left down so that he is conscious that he is growing and progressing toward being a "big" boy or girl. Behavior changes accordingly.

All parental punishments should be viewed with suspicion. The conduct may be inspired by too many punishments, or too severe ones, or the child may be the victim of too many bosses and too much opposition to letting him have his own way, any of the time. Just to ease up on any of these tensions is to relieve the child from strains which are only soothed by the indulgence in undesirable habits.

Our leaflet, "Nervous Habits," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

It used to be that toil worn hands were expected of anyone working in a factory. But no more—not since women have gone into industry. The girls in the war plants around New York have found out how to keep their hands from showing the grease and grime.

I think their suggestions are well worth passing along. Almost every woman needs to take better care of her hands these days. There are no more rubber gloves for dishwashing and scrubbing.

If it is necessary to use strong soap, rinse off every particle of the soap and dry your hands thoroughly, then put on a cream rich in lanolin. The cream works better if the hands are completely dry.

To remove the dirt from under the nails, wrap a bit of cotton around the point of your orange stick, dip it in cuticle remover, and slip under the nail. Some of the girls find it helps to scratch the nails lightly over the surface of a jar of hand cream before going on the job. Cream packed under the nail protects it and there's no trouble dislodging the grime at the end of a day.

Of course, the nails should not be too long. The National Safety Council recommends that for greatest efficiency in heavy work, the nails should be even with the fingertips. Long nails break too easily and ragged edges slow you down. That is true whether you are working on the assembly line or pounding a typewriter.

Round, broad tips are stronger than pointed tips. Don't file or cut in deeply at the sides of the nails. Have them oval in shape. They're more attractive, anyway. The nail edge should be beveled with the fine side of an emery board rather than with a steel file. The file leaves both the nail edge and the underlining so rough that dirt is easily picked up.

Wool Goes Gallivanting

By Ruth Gregory

Have you heard? My dears, the fashion world is all abuzz. The marriage between silk and glitter is on the rocks. Virtuous wool has been named as corespopndent.

Yes, dressed-up woolens for party-going and gadding are a surprise fashion for 1943. Not really so surprising. It didn't need an Einstein to figure an equation between underheated wartime living rooms and WPB releasing more wool for civilian use. But it did take your insistence upon brightening up the dull and some ingenious designing to produce a total that equaled warmth plus radiance.

The dress sketched will give you an idea of the way designers have glorified the shirtwaist—just polka-dotted over gray jersey. Just such a simple touch as that pulls this dress up from the limbo of the maybe grim. They've done the same for coat-dresses—a bead-embroidered blouse does the trick. They've deepened necklines, elsewhere, shortened sleeves, draped wools in the same way they'd handle crepe. They've used the jeweled things—sequins, beads, rhinestones—to complement soft pastels. They've trimmed black wool with jet, with satin, with shiny applique.

We'll spot these dresses when they come to town and let you know who has 'em. Meanwhile, don't be thinking crepes and satins have lost out—more about that tomorrow.

Converting Nylon Stockings

Nylon stockings turned in by American women are "unraveled" chemically by being immersed in a chemical that turns the stockings into their original ingredients: a black powder and a brown liquid. These in turn are converted into war materials.

Tack Sandpaper to Block

Cuffed Trousers Again

Lifting of the restrictions on the finishing of men's and boys' trousers by War Production Board means that we may be seeing cuffs on trousers again. But since limitations on trouser lengths remain unchanged, full cuffs will be rare; what may be seen will probably be simulated cuffs. It takes 5 inches of extra material for a full cuff, whereas a simulated one can be made from 3 inches.

Maple Typical American Wood

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Our affection for maple furniture is a near and dear part of our American heritage. The use of maple for early American furniture grew out of its abundance in the new world, for though Europe does have maple, it is not so bountiful nor so versatile for furniture as the American varieties. American maple is light in color and hard, wears well, takes a fine polish. But perhaps its best quality is its genial way of being all things to all people. For it is a wood that serves practically and comfortable for plain unpretentious furniture—yet it holds its head high and proud when used with mahogany for formal Sheraton-style pieces of American make.

Maple trees of a quality for furniture timber grow across this continent from Newfoundland to South Dakota and down as far as South Carolina and Texas. But Michigan and Wisconsin are the big maple States, producing 60 per cent of our maple lumber.

This genial wood is beloved by Americans, not only because it is at hand to use but because it fits so well into the forthright informal small homes of our land. Though maple is a fine hard wood suitable for intricate carving, inlaying and other cabinet didoes, it is rarely found in those forms in America—the pioneers liked plain honest clean lines, and this mood contributes further to its suitability for the small homes of today. Natural maple is very light in color and acquires a soft honey color with proper finishing. But of recent years there's been a bad tendency to stain it bright brown or reddish brown; many who have maple with this not-so-good tone remove all that and do it over in a nice light natural tone.

Another charm about maple is the fact that it combines so engagingly with so many colors. Against pale green walls it is lovely—with crisp white curtains and cherry-red predominating in the chintzes. Or against dark-green walls maple is sophisticated—with dull mustard color predominating in the draperies and upholsteries and copper for accent. Or consider robin's egg blue walls for your maple room—with a figured chintz in a toile de Jony design of mulberry on white. White walls with lemon-yellow chintz, shaggy white string rugs, white and yellow candlewick spreads or slip covers (practical because they can go into the washer) would be a cheerful background for maple. Pale gray walls are nice with maple too, especially with a gray rug and riotously flowered chintzes for curtains and upholstery.

There are many charming wall papers that maple furniture—by virtue of its simplicity sets off to advantage, often ornate furniture. On the other hand, maple is good with the small quaint all-over colonial papers. For that matter it fits agreeably against pine-panelled walls or cloth covered walls (chintz or calico or toile de Jouy).

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

Dominant Females

NEWS ITEM—A Nazi woman propagandist, recently seized in this country, was collecting stories and pictures to show the dominance of American women—and the consequent decadence of democracies.

A Wife Speaks

"Yes, I'm certainly the boss of my home. I work about 16 hours a week at it now, hunting meat at the markets (he just can't eat a meal without it), or devising substitutes (it's almost impossible to fool him though and how he does fume about oleb!) and doing all my own scrubbing and cleaning (he likes a house neat and clean and anyway it's more of an inducement to him to come home), and here lately with the laundry and cleaning so uncertain, I've had to do up some of his shirts and press his suits. And then I help out in the garden (he has so little time, and is so tired at night, and he needs the vegetables for the vitamins—he's so careless about his food downtown) and then on top of all that I have to keep up my exercises (he doesn't like women who get flabby) and get my wave set (he detests stringy hair) and of course look attractive about the house and keep up on the news of the day so I'll be stimulating and interesting and charming and everything (of course it's not that he'd ever do it, but he's not going to have any excuse to step out if I can help it!)

The Secretary Speaks

"Yet, everybody says I really run this office. (Say, are my stocking seams straight? . . . Does my slip show? . . . I'm expecting him to ring any minute.) Yes, I'm the first one here in the morning (he'd have a fit if I didn't have his desk and pictures and elephant collection dusted, and his ivy washed, and his pencils sharpened) and then I have to stay a lot of evenings when he doesn't get around to dictating until 4 o'clock. Why I simply handle everything for him—his banking, and his bills, and his personal letters, and the shopping for his wife, and I buy all the Christmas, wedding, birthday and anniversary presents he has to give, and order the flowers he has to send, and I've even run out and bought him an extra shirt. (Say, is my lipstick too bright? He doesn't like it too heavy—or too pale either. He's very particular how the girls in this office look.) Yes, it's a very interesting job—I meet so many people in keeping all the pests and bores and crackpots away from him. (My hair's simply a mess, I'm getting a shampoo tonight. He doesn't like greasy hair in the office.) I really don't see how he'd run this place without me—oh, there he's ringing now! (Say, does my finger nail look awful—where the polish is chipped?) Wait, let me get this bottle of cleaning fluid. He said something about having gotten a spot on his vest."

The Career Woman Speaks

"Yes, women are certainly going places in this country. That's just what Mr. Soaper says—he's one of the head men in our office and a very wonderful man. Of course it keeps us hopping to hold down these big jobs. Now take me. I've been in 14 conferences today with the various head men. Of course it's all very interesting because they are really such wonderful men and have such wonderful ideas, but—well of course I still have my own work to do. Then I have a fitting this afternoon and a facial and a body massage—you know a woman's looks and clothes are so important in business, especially when you're dealing with big important men. Then I should get on to cocktails—for a very important contact. Some very wonderful man down from New York. Home? Oh yes I have a darling little apartment very simply done with a few good etchings and pieces of sculpture, and some big easy chairs and literally dozens of ash trays. Just a little place where I can invite my men friends in for a home cooked steak and some French fries. You know I meet some very wonderful men in my work."

A Glamour Speaks

"I think women are really dominant in this country. Where else can a girl have so much freedom? (Say what time it it . . . I'm due at my riding lesson at 5 . . . No I'm not particularly keen about it but if you ride you're likely to meet a nicer set of fellows). Work? Oh yes I have a part-time war job now and am I busy! Yes, you see with my swimming and my tennis and my fencing and my esthetic dancing . . . But you really need it all if you're going to have men—that is anybody look twice at you at a beach. And then of course I take singing and speech and personality development and I'm studying Spanish now (Yes it might come in handy in a career—and then nowadays you meet so many charming South American men) And then I have to squeeze in my hairdresser and my manicurist and pedicurist and then all my shopping (Even with these WPB regulations there's some new style coming out every week) Sometimes I'm so rushed I think I'll go crazy but what it a girl to do? That is unless she wants to sit home with a good book."

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Ceiling prices were placed on berries last week by OPA. But it was rather a cart-before-the-horse affair. The much loved strawberries, raspberries—both red and black, and luscious blackberries had for the most part come into market and passed out of the picture before the action was taken.

Martha Ellyn

Perhaps now the price pendulum will swing favorably for the cook, and those little flavorsome blue balls called blueberries will be obtainable at a somewhat reasonable price, so they can be made into appealing dishes.

Blueberries are used all down the line in cookery, from soups to hotbreads, from jellies to dessert. You can start the day off with blueberry griddle cakes for breakfast and serve blueberry cake or pudding for supper.

But don't plan a too heavy menu when you are going to serve blueberry pudding or cake for the evening meal. Here's a suggestion for a menu:

Dinner Menu

Crab Meat Souffle
Tomato Sauce
Peas Green Bean Salad
Butter Gems Apple Butter
Blueberry Pudding
Iced Coffee

You can serve blueberry pudding of the hot or cold variety. Following are recipes for both kinds:

BLUEBERRY CRUMB PUDDING

Combine 1 cup zweiback crumbs with ¼ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon. Add 3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine and mix well. Place 1 cup blueberries in greased casserole. Cover with half the crumb mixture. Add 1 cup blueberries and top with remaining crumbs. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Chill thoroughly. Cut in squares and serve with cream. Serves 4 to 6 persons.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING

Cream ¼ cup shortening with ¾ cup sugar. Add 1 beaten egg and beat well. Sift 2¼ cups flour with ½ teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Reserve ¼ cup of the flour mixture to mix with blueberries. Add the dry ingredients alternately with ½ cup milk to the creamed mixture. Beat thoroughly. Stir in 1 cup blueberries. Bake in greased 9-inch-square pan in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot. Serves 6.

BLUEBERRY CAKE

Sift flour to make 2½ cupfuls. Resift with 2½ teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Cream ½ cup butter or other shortening thoroughly and add 1 cup sugar gradually. Cream all thoroughly. Add the flour alternately with ½ cup milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. This makes a stiff batter. Fold in 2 cups blueberries. Turn into greased 12 by 8 inch pan, spreading evenly. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Despite the heat, Washington clubs continue their fund raising. In order to bring all members together and to add new ones to the group, the City of Hope Auxiliary Helpers, Los Angeles Sanatorium, will hold a membership tea Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at Winthrop House, 1727 Massachusetts Avenue.

Purpose behind the membership drive is to get workers to help raise funds to carry on the fight against tuberculosis. Another fund-raising function planned is a summer moonlight cruise dance, August 4 on the S. S. Potomac.

Highlight of Sunday's event will be a playlet, "Fusion Ticket." Members of the cast are Dorothy Jacobs, Louise Lessner, Natalie Van Gelder, Selma Cohen and Phyllis Harzenstein.

Government Courses

In order to replenish the dwindling staffs of professional workers in the Federal Government, Columbia University is giving special courses to train college graduates who have specialized in the social sciences. They are being held under the auspices of the faculty of political science and the school of business. Primarily the courses were planned for women and men who are unlikely to be summoned for war service.

The trainees are recruited from graduates who have majored in the social sciences and who require further advanced professional education to qualify them for responsible posts in economic research, statistical research, public administration, international relations, information service, diplomatic and consular services, accounting and tax research.

P.-T. A. Still Busy

Although most of the regular activities of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers are suspended during the vacation months, officers and committee chairmen are endeavoring to perfect their plans so that when school reopens they will have suggestions for their local unit chairmen.

One of the last things done by the board of managers before its summer adjournment was to disapprove legislation which might be enacted, directed toward establishing a curfew law in the District. Since all members of the board of managers either are parents or teachers, they are qualified to report on such legislation and undoubtedly can sense the reaction of the children it would seek to control.

Several reasons were given by the board for its objection, one of these being that such law is in direct contradiction of the principles of democratic government. Another objection was that by the very nature of youth, such restrictions would tend to create a rebellious attitude, which would find an outlet in disobedience, and it would be impossible to provide sufficient personnel to enforce the law. However, the chief objection of the board lay in the fact that again parents would be relieved of their rightful responsibility toward their children.

The Parent-Teacher Association has maintained consistently that parental delinquency is in a great measure responsible for juvenile delinquency and therefore the evil should be corrected at its source.

Still another organization has gone—good neighboring. This time it's the Quota International Club. International President Frances L. Landry of Baton Rouge, La., has announced the decision of the board of directors to offer a scholarship to a Latin-American woman for 1943-'44, at Louisiana State University. The scholarship is the outgrowth of Quota's interest in the furtherance of the good-neighbor policy in the Western Hemisphere. The scholarship is given for 1944 as a part of the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Quota International in 1919. A service organization, Quota restricts its membership to women executives in the business and professional fields. Member clubs are located in the United States, Canada and Australia.

To Keep Uncooked Meat

Uncooked meat should be lightly covered with waxed paper before storing in refrigerator. Place right under the freezer and maintain temperature at 33 to 37 degrees. Wipe meat with a damp cloth before cooking.

Market Report On Vegetables And Fruits

'Tis the middle of the summer, and a number of ripe, fresh vegetables, chock-full of food value, are now plentiful on the Washington wholesale market. So if you're planning meals that follow the Government's basic seven-food guide, you'll find the inclusion of the fresh vegetable and fruit groups to be a comparatively easy job.

According to the Washington Market Reporter of the Food Distribution Administration, tomatoes, a top vegetable in group 2 of the basic seven, are abundant on the local wholesale market. They now are coming from the commercial producing sections of the Eastern Shore and New Jersey. Their quality is good and they are wearing lower price tags than a week ago. On the guide this group also includes oranges, grapefruit, raw cabbage and salad greens.

In providing for group 1 the green and yellow vegetable group, nutritionally minded homemakers will find green beans, cabbage, lettuce and cucumbers to be plentiful. The green beans, cabbage and Western iceberg lettuce are priced the same as last week, while the price of cucumbers has slid downward. The cabbage is the round green variety noted for its Vitamins C and A content. Serve it raw and reap 100 per cent return on its food value.

The green beans include both the round and flat types, and the quality varies from fair to very good. Corn, both the white and yellow varieties, and green peppers are in moderate supply. Their price remains the same as last week. The quality of the corn is good and that of the green peppers improved over a week ago. California carrots are in lighter supply and higher priced. Although in light supply, radishes and spring onions are moderately priced. Celery and green peas are scarce and high.

Potatoes are the important vegetable of group 3 on the Government chart, and they, too, are plentiful. Their quality is very good and their price lower. Make good use of this bargain package of food value.

Several fruits advertise summer's bounty also. Cantaloupes, now coming from the famous Ridgeway section of North Carolina, are abundant on the local wholesale market. Their quality is very good and their price tags lower. Watermelons, too, are in more liberal supply than last week. The larger 32 to 34 pound melons have dropped a little in price; the smaller ones remain the same.

The season for grapes and pears is just starting. They are of good quality but high priced. Lemons and limes are in liberal supply and make cooling summer drinks that add to your Vitamin C supply. The limes are lower in price, while the lemons remain at ceiling prices.

Care for Briefcase

To help prevent wear on leather briefcases, go over them frequently with furniture wax applied with a soft cloth. This also makes cleaning and spot removal easier.

Salt Is a Luxury

Salt, an everyday commodity available for a few cents a package to everyone in the United States, is a luxury to over 50 per cent of the world's population.

Oven Protocol

Place meat on the bottom of the oven, vegetables in the center, and pastries and desserts on top.

Make Nail Keg Seats

Nail kegs can be made into attractive seats if you have the requisite ingenuity needed. At her home at the beach, Actress Patricia Morison has used nail kegs, varnished bright, as porch stools and tops them with round canvas covered cushions. For a guest bedroom she used another nail keg and covered it entirely in the same chintz that is used for the bedspread and curtains.

MISS MARTHA GLADYS RAY

Mr. and Mrs. Claude D. Ray of Corinth, Miss., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha Gladys Ray, to Roy F. Segur, son of Mrs. Hazel Segur of New York and the late Roy F. Segur.

The wedding will take place on August 7 at high noon in St. Joseph's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

Elinor Boyes Is Bride of Gale Spowers

Miss Elinor Jerl Boyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leighton W. Boyes of Glen Ridge, N. J., and Lieut. (j. g.) Gale McComb Spowers, U. S. N., son of Lieut. Comdr. William Harvey Spowers, jr., U. S. N., and Mrs. Spowers, of Silver Spring, Md., were married yesterday at 1 o'clock, the ceremony taking place in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel. Maj. Richard Braunstein, chaplain, U. S. A., officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a street-length frock of pearl gray satin with a white satin Dutch calot. Miss Katherine Perry of Washington was her only attendant and Lieut. (j. g.) J. Roland Hill, U. S. N., was best man for the bridegroom.

After a two-weeks' trip to Maine with a stop in New York, Lieutenant and Mrs. Spowers will return to Washington and will be at home at 2540 Massachusetts Avenue until October 1.

Jane Jacob Is Married to J.A. Poropatick

In a simply arranged ceremony yesterday at 4 o'clock, in the post chapel at Fort Meade, Md., Miss Jane Thomson Jacob—known to her friends as Betty—became the bride of Sergt. Joseph A. Poropatick, U. S. A. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey D. Jacob of Washington.

For her wedding the bride wore an afternoon frock of pale blue with a corsage of white flowers and white accessories. She had as her only attendant Miss Dorothy Barclay. William Poropatick of Pittsburgh, Pa., was his brother's best man.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for a honeymoon in the North. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Poropatick of Pittsburgh. He attended the University of Pittsburgh. The bride is a graduate of Western High School.

Hurleys Sell Belmont, Their Virginia Estate

Belmont, country estate of Gen. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, at Leesburg, Va., has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. George C. Clarke of Chevy Chase. Mr. Clarke is owner of the Ebbitt Hotel.

Recently the Virginia estate was occupied by Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth, and his family while General Hurley has been serving abroad on special mission for President Roosevelt and Mrs. Hurley has been living at their home in New Mexico.

Belmont is rich in historic interest. Built in 1796 by Ludwell Lee, son of the signer of the Declaration of Independence, the house served for a short period as the seat of the United States Government when President James Madison fled to nearby Virginia during the War of 1812. The house is set down among boxwood hedges, tall trees and rolling gardens. It is of Georgian period with low wings on either side and a pillared portico.

Belmont was once owned by Mrs. Edward B. McLean and the late Mr. McLean, and its stables quartered the McLean race horses.

Soviet Envoy's Wife One Diplomatic Hostess Not Trying to Cope With Summertime Washington; Is Writing at Undisclosed New York Address

One diplomatic hostess who shook the hot Washington dust from her feet early in the season, has been away all summer, and hopes she won't have to come back until the snow falls—or later—is Ivy Litvinov, English-born wife of the Soviet Ambassador.

When her husband took off to Moscow to make a first-hand report to Premier Stalin, she esconced herself in a mid-town apartment in New York; resolved to stay there until her husband returns.

"It'll be my first real vacation from official duties in 10 years," she said just before she left. "I'm going to make the most of it."

"Make the most of it—how?" she was asked. She implied that wouldn't be hard; specifically she said: "I'll do a bit of reading, a little writing, perhaps; and find some time for drawing . . . and music. All that should keep me busy."

One firm order she left at the embassy: her New York address was not to be disclosed. She was a temporary fugitive from receiving lines and diplomatic dinners, and—for once in her life—she wanted her time to be her own.

Rumors have made the Washington rounds that when Mme. Litvinov finally emerges from her Manhattan hiding place, another book with her name on the spine will be in the hands of the publishers. Other lines of town talk have it that she had a contract for several magazine articles, some of which will carry illustrations by the author.

A New York gossip columnist recently reported that Mme. Litvinov was giving all her vacation time to studying music. Another hinted that she was penning a powerful sequel to "Moscow Mystery," her novel of murder and intrigue, written 13 years ago, but published in this country only recently.

My special Manhattan inform-

ant has gumshoed around Mme. Litvinov's semisecret New York address for some time, asking questions, trying to find out exactly what she is doing. The answer seems to be—writing, chiefly. Writing; walking; going to the movies; getting a suntan on the roof of her apartment which, incidentally, commands one of the best views of the New York skyline . . and then writing some more.

That's about what I expected. Anybody who has noted the light in Mme. Litvinov's eyes at any mention of her published pieces, would know she takes great pride in authorship; would suspect she might manage a summertime schedule, at least, that would give her more time toward that end.

I remember an illuminating incident at a luncheon Mrs. Joseph Davies gave for newspaperwomen last year. Mme. Litvinov was one of the few guests there besides members of the "petticoat press." A reporter, spotting her in the assembly in the Davies' reception room, coasted over with a compliment about her article, "Embroidery," which had just appeared in Vogue magazine.

"It doesn't seem quite fair though, Mme. Litvinov," opined the reporter. "You have so much else . . . and now it turns out you can write, too."

"All this . . and Heaven, too," Mme. Litvinov came back with a chuckle, "Well, anybody who wants it can have the rest. The writing, I like."

She must have decided that quite early in life; for while still in her 'teens, the former Ivy Low, daughter of Walter Low, turned out two short novels, "Growing Pains" and "The Questing Beast." Since her mother, Alice Herbert, was a fiction reviewer for English newspapers and her uncles, Sir Sidney and Sir Maurice Low, were widely known publicists in their time, it was only natural that little Ivy would try her hand at writing, too. But her progress hasn't been too rapid, nor has she ever had—until now—a chance to give much time to her favorite pursuit.

Her "Moscow Mystery," first entitled "His Master's Voice" was offered to a number of American publishers shortly after it was completed. They turned it down. American readers, they felt, weren't interested in books about spring over the Kremlin . . . and mystery around it. Only after Ivy Low became chatelaine of the Soviet Embassy here . . . and the armed Soviet forces began beating back the Germans . . . did her mystery novel become interesting enough to merit American publication.

Washington has speculated widely on whether Mme. Litvinov would be as popular as she is—or popular, at all—if she hadn't happened to come just at the time when American admiration for, and gratitude toward, the Soviet army was rising to fever pitch. The town was in a loving-Russia mood by the time the stocky Maxim and his wife opened the doors of the Soviet Embassy for their first reception in our Capital.

Before that, of course, they had been given a splash "debut" by gilt-edged capitalism when Joseph Davies, former United States envoy to Russia, and his wife, the breakfast food heiress, invited officialdom in droves to meet the Soviet newcomers at a big-league reception. They had chatted with a small, hand-picked group of Capitalites at an informal tea given by Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles; and they had received calls from several notables who first met them in Moscow.

Mme. Litvinov had a lot of fun telling her story of the purple frock—the gown she wore to the Davies party, and then remodeled for the Soviet Embassy reception, "so it would look different . . and the society reporters would have something new to write about." In her article "Embroidery" she dropped more than a gentle hint that the grateful scribes never guessed it was the same dress, and went into ecstasies describing it in new terms. What she probably doesn't know until now is that most reporters realized, of course, that it was the same dress. Courtesy prompted them to refrain from saying so, and to describe it the second time as if it had never been seen before.

Mme. Litvinov is clever—anyone who knows her will admit that. She is forceful, frank, and informal in manner. Her conversation is chock full of witty phrases, and her range of interests apparently is boundless. Diplomacy is not one of her strong points, however; she says exactly what she thinks—when and where she pleases. And more often than not, her quips fall bluntly on ears not prepared to take them in the manner intended.

She has wondered, aloud, why Americans persist in calling her "Madam" when she wants to be just plain "Mrs;" why so many American women pluck their eyebrows and spend so much thought and time on dress; why the glamor girls of Hollywood all try to look alike; and why nobody told her before she came to Washington that its winter weather is as chilling as Russia's. But time and again she has declared she likes America, and Americans; and that she wouldn't take anything for her current experience. Fact is, last time I talked to her I got the distinct impression she thought everything over here did pretty well—except the press. She said she couldn't understand how so many reporters had been able to turn out so much copy about her. "I never saw anything like it," she went on, "why every time I pick up a newspaper I find out something else about myself—and it's usually all bosh." Then she added twinkling. "Don't you journalists believe, at all, in the law of diminishing returns?"

Not always. And if we did, Mme. Litvinov wouldn't be half as important in American eyes as she is today. No diplomatic hostess has even been accorded such a glowing press "build-up" as she; but if she hasn't taken it for what it is—a gesture of tribute to the Soviet Union rather than to her, personally—she isn't as perceptive as most of us think.

Expert Service, Good Food, Cool Setting Attract Hundreds to Garden Canteen

Red Cross Workers Serve Outdoor Luncheons Daily

By Peggy Preston

It's all in a day's work at the Red Cross Garden Canteen . . .

The wife of an Army general was performing her chores at the sandwich counter under the red and white striped awning in the square of garden in back of the District Red Cross Building, where the Canteen operates each day during the luncheon hour. A second lieutenant edged his tray along the rail in front of her and pointed to a "Dagwood Canteen Special."

"I want a sandwich made with lettuce, mayonnaise, tomatoes, ham, cheese and mustard, on whole wheat bread." He rattled it off and added, as the lady in blue calmly began to comply, "Can you remember all I told you to put in it?"

"Of course," she replied. "Why not?"

"Well, at —— I have to repeat an order like that four or five times," answered the second lieutenant.

It isn't only such expert service, plus the good food that attracts that long waiting line every day at the Canteen. It's popularity is due, at least in part, to the fact that the Garden Canteen is probably the coolest and most pleasantly informal luncheon spot in town this summer.

Boy Sets Up Shoe Shine Stand

So pleasant it is, in fact, that the workers in charge have a difficult time keeping their patrons within the prescribed limits—Red Cross personnel and members of the armed forces.

All manner of "uninvited guests" turn up. One day, for instance, an officer was spied lunching in the shade of a broad oak tree. While he sipped his ice tea a young shoe-shine boy was giving his shoes a proper going-over.

The officer, unaware that this was not a part of the Red Cross "service," was pleased with the procedure, but Mrs. Mastin White, vice chairman of the District Canteen, quickly shooed the youngster away. Undaunted, the boy turned up a few minutes later under another tree, was ordered away and returned again. The ladies resorted to strong-arm methods.

The sight of so many officers lounging around at what appears to be a picnic is too much for salesmen to resist. Boys selling magazines, papers, post cards, pencils and what not wander in from time to time and all are carefully picked up and placed out of bounds by the now rather watchful canteen workers.

Everyone who can returns to the garden for luncheon each day. It is particularly popular with naval personnel, situated as it is within a short walk from the Navy buildings. All types of uniforms are glimpsed at the wooden benches under the trees; the new grays of the Navy along with the summer khakies; the navy blues of the WAVES and SPARS, the pale blues of the Red Cross volunteers, and here and there a uniform of one of the foreign missions in Washington.

Volunteers Work Hard and Long

Officials of both the District and National Red Cross are always there. Norman Davis may be seen every noon lunching with members of his staff or with friends. At one table the other day were Mrs. George Angus Garrett, chairman of the Volunteer Services, who recently succeeded Miss Mabel Boardman; Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, national chairman of the Camp and Hospital Services; Mrs. David Finley of the District Chapter, and their guest, Mrs. James Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy.

Behind the scenes, a crew of between 20 and 30 Red Cross volunteers work diligently to make the Canteen the success that it is. They employ but four paid workers, one of which is a cook. The rest of the jobs they do themselves, serving between 500 and 600 people daily.

Canteen Open Only To Red Cross and Military Personnel

To qualify for the canteen service, women must complete 40 hours of training in nutrition and canteen work. In order to facilitate service this summer, the canteen has enlisted the aid of a group of young school and college girls who are called auxiliaries. They are not required to take the training courses, and perform only such tasks as carrying trays, clearing tables and helping at the cold-drink or ice cream stations.

The cost of these luncheons are amazingly low, but a small profit is realized nonetheless and put into the upkeep fund, or turned over to the Chapter. The workers are proudest of their gleaning red and white awning, bought this year with their excess funds.

Beck-Herrick Troth Told

Miss Jacqueline Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Beck of Washington, will become the bride of Lieut. Donald L. Herrick, U. S. M. C., on Saturday in New York. The wedding will take place at the Little Church Around the Corner.

Lieutenant Herrick, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Herrick of Miles City, Mont., lived in Washington for several years before joining the aviation division of the Marine Corps. He recently returned from an extended tour of duty in the Southwest Pacific area and has been awarded the Air Medal and the Purple Heart decoration.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — In the Sky, She's My Spy — By Milton Caniff

GENTLEMEN, WE HAVE A POSITIVE REPORT THAT THE ENEMY HAS BUILT AN AIR FIELD ON ISLAND 407! I THINK WE MAY EXPECT A VISIT FROM THE LITTLE PEOPLE ANY DAY!
MEANWHILE—JOSS GOODE'S TRANSPORT PLANE IS ON ITS WAY TO AUSTRALIA WITH THE CAPTAIN'S REPORTS — AND AN UNHAPPY PRISONER...
MA'AM, I'M RIGHT SORRY T'SEE YOU DISCOMFITTED THIS WAY...
SIR, THIS WOMAN IS A PRISONER—SHE IS TO TALK TO NO ONE...
SAHGEANT, I MUST CALL YOAH ATTENTION TO TH' FACT THAT I AM TH' COMMANDIN' OFFICUH OF THIS SHIP...YOU WILL STAND BY WHILE I INQUIUH AS TO THE WELFAIUH OF TH' PRISONUH IN MY CHAHGE!
YESSIR

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

SKIPPER KENT! WE DON'T SPILL OUR CEREAL WHEN WE EAT LUNCH! I'M AFRAID YOU'LL HAVE TO LEAVE THE TABLE TILL YOUR MANNERS IMPROVE!
MISS MASTERS! PLEASE...
THE SKIPPER ISN'T BAD—HE NEEDS HELP—AND KINDNESS!—HE CAN BE TAUGHT!
PERHAPS YOU WOULD LIKE TO TEACH ME HOW TO HANDLE CHILDREN, MISS VANCE?
I DON'T WANT TO OPPOSE YOU—BUT YOU SEEM TO FORGET THAT THE SKIPPER HAS NO MOTHER...!
OH! AND DO YOU HOPE TO FILL THAT VACANCY? PLEASE REMEMBER, MISS SHERRY VANCE—ALL RELATIONS BETWEEN PATRONS AND STAFF MEMBERS MUST BE KEPT STRICTLY IMPERSONAL!

MICKEY FINN — All Over — By Lank Leonard

MR. AND MRS. — The Radio to the Rescue — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

PHEW, BUT THIS HAS BEEN A SCORCHER! I COULD STAND A LITTLE ESCAPIST STUFF
NOW TO FORGET THE HEAT!
WE BRING YOU THIS EVENING—
NOTHING THESE DAYS IS MORE SATISFYING THAN WHUFFO'S SOUPS—SERVED HOT—PIPING HOT—FOR LUNCH OR DINNER—
JOE, COME TO DINNER BEFORE THE SOUP GETS COLD
JUST LIKE MOTHER MADE IT AT THE BACK OF THE OLD STOVE

DIXIE DUGAN — A Phony? — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

INDIANS ?? BAH !!
WHAT'S THIS? A GAG ???
NO—REALLY IT ISN'T—
—I SAW AN INDIAN CHIEF STANDING ON A HILL NEAR THE LITTLE PIONEER VILLAGE—
I THOUGHT DIXIE WAS SEEING THINGS—BUT, WELL—I SAW HIM TOO!
COME ON, MR. DUGAN! LET'S CATCH THE GUY! I'LL BET HE'S A PHONY!
UH—PERHAPS YOU'D BETTER GO ALONE... YA SEE MY RHEUMATICS HAVE SLOWED ME UP LATELY—
GO ON, PA! EVEN IF HE IS A WILD INDIAN, WHAT HAVE YOU GOT TO LOSE??

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

FREDDIE! DID YOU WEAR MY SLACKS TO THE OFFICE?
OH, MGOSH!

JOE PALOOKA — Man to Man — By Ham Fisher

HERE'S TH' ESCAPED NAZI, MIKE—TRIED TKILL ME—
HE KILLED A GUARD AND A FARMER... I JUST HEARD IT ON THE RADIO...
HE'S BEEN TELLIN' ME WHAT THEY'RE GONNA DO TO THE UNITED STATES. MURDER EVRYBUDDY—WOMEN, KIDS—
YA! LIKE ROTTERDAM UND WARSAW—HA HA—
AN' BECUZ HE AIN'T GOT A REGIMENT AN' DIVE BOMBERS LET'S SHOW 'IM HOW ONE AMERICAN KIN HANDLE THIS KINDA ARYAN PUNK WITH BARE HANDS!
CRASH!

JANE ARDEN — A New Assignment — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

7-22
NICE STORY, JANE—
AND THAT PUTS AN END TO ONE BLACK MARKET IN GASOLINE, I HOPE
AND THAT'S HOW WE DID IT—BOTH HIGHJACKERS CAPTURED!
LAWSY ME, HONEY CHILE, WEREN'T YOU SCARED?
I'VE GOT ANOTHER STORY FOR YOU, JANE—EVER HEAR OF PHILANDER STUN?
THE BIG MUNITIONS MAGNATE?
THAT'S THE BOY—HE'S GOT SOME SORT OF STORY UP HIS SLEEVE BEAT IT UP THERE AND SEE WHAT'S GOING ON!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

THE FBI SHOULD BE DELIGHTED TO TAKE OVER THESE SLEEPING BEAUTIES!
URSENT NEWS FLASH! RESIDENTS OF THIS AREA ARE URGED TO FLEE! THE GADSBY DAM HAS BEEN BOMBED—THOUSANDS OF LIVES ARE THREATENED...!
I HATED TO RUN OUT ON MY CAPTIVES, BUT I'VE GOT TO PREVENT LOSS OF LIFE OCCURING FROM THAT DAM EXPLOSION!
I DON'T GET IT! THERE'S NOTHING WRONG WITH THE DAM. CAN THAT RADIO NEWS REPORT BE SOME SORT OF NEW SCARE-BROADCAST??
SWIFTLY, SUPERMAN SPEEDS BACK TO THE MEETING PLACE BENEATH THE RUG ESTABLISHMENT...ONLY TO FIND IT DESERTED!
A NOTE TO ME FROM THE SNEER! HE HAD ANTICIPATED THAT I MIGHT OPPOSE HIM, JUST AS I HAD OPPOSED HIS BROTHER, AND HAD PREPARED FOR SUCH AN EVENTUALITY. HE SAYS I CAN LEARN THE ANSWER BY EXAMINING THIS RADIO.

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — The Stop and Go System — By Frank Martinek

HE'S BEEN SHOT THROUGH THIS WINDOW! CALL THE POLICE AND HAVE THEM SEND THE CORONER!
AYE, AYE, SIR!!
FROM THE LOOKS OF THE HOLE IN THE WINDOW PANE, THE BULLET WAS OF LARGE CALIBER!
WHAT'S THE ANSWER, SKIPPER?
THE SHOT WAS FIRED FROM A DISTANCE BECAUSE HAD IT BEEN CLOSE TO THE GLASS THE PANE WOULD HAVE BEEN SHATTERED!
THE LOCAL POLICE HAVE ARRIVED AS THE CHIEF SAYS...
JUMPIN' JELLY BEANS... THE OLD MAN'S BEEN MURDERED..... WHAT ARE YOU DOIN' HERE?

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

BETTER CLOSE YOUR WINDOW, BOYS—WE'RE COMING TO A TUNNEL!
I BEG YOUR PARDON—COULD YOU YOUNG MEN LEND A HAND WITH MY LUGGAGE, PLEASE?
OF COURSE—BUT YOU CAN'T GET OFF! WE'RE STILL 20 MINUTES OUT OF STOCKTON!
YES, YES! BUT MY DAUGHTER IS IN THE CAR BEHIND—AND THIS SUITCASE IS SO HEAVY—!
COME ON, WAHOO! DO YOUR GOOD DEED FOR THE DAY!
MAYBE I HAVE—!

DONALD DUCK — The Stop and Go System — By Walt Disney

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

SPYIN', EH?
BOY! AM I GLAD KING K.O.'D TH' BIG GUY!
—YOU'RE JUST MY SIZE!
NO, DOC! DON'T SHOOT ME—
WHAT TH—?
CRASH!

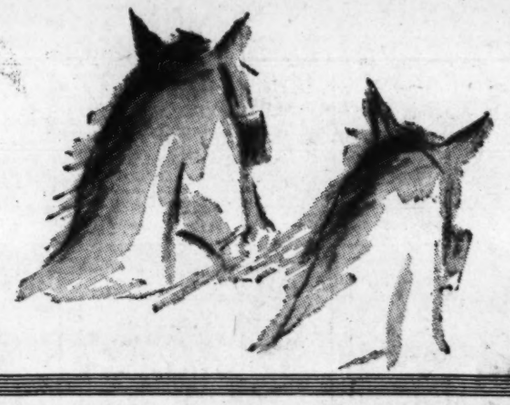
No. 5 IN A SERIES DEDICATED TO THE PRESERVATION OF THE 'AMERICAN HOME'

"My Old Kentucky Home"

A stately Colonial mansion in the heart of the blue-grass country. Graceful young belles with coquettish parasols . . tripping up to the wide-arched doorway. Debonair gentlemen in colorful frock coats . . . comparing notes on their fleet blue-blooded steeds. Plaintive, nostalgic songs at evening . . when the rich-voiced darkies gathered to serenade the "Massa" and his Lady. Such was the gracious, gallant Southland . . when the genius of Stephen Foster was inspired to immortalize . . . for all time . . . "My Old Kentucky Home" . . . symbolic of the serenity, the peace America is fighting for . . . symbolic of the Home endeared to the hearts of the American people . . . who are investing every available dollar in War Bonds and Stamps to protect that Home forever.

Copyright, 1943, The Hecht Co.



YOU ARE INVITED TO VIEW THE ELEVEN "THEME" WINDOWS DEDICATED TO THE PRESERVATION OF THE AMERICAN HOME . . . .

SEE America's first "Home Sweet Home" . . replica of Mt. Vernon in miniature . . displayed in our corner window at 7th and F Streets. So perfectly scaled . . so authentically reproduced . . it will conjure up visions of the rich full life led in that pleasant house on the Potomac . . a home that symbolizes all America stands for . . the thing we're fighting to preserve today.

SEE "Fireside Chat" . . (Early American Style) . . the Pilgrim windows reflecting that Old American custom of clustering around the fire at day's end . . and weaving ever closer the threads that make a home.

SEE "My Old Kentucky Home" . . the window dedicated to the gracious living of the Old South . . the serene and peaceful homes in the heart of the blue-grass country that inspired Stephen Foster's immortal melody.

SEE "Seeing Nellie Home" . . the nostalgic window reminiscent of New York in the gay 90's . . the days of the Floradora girls, young men in bowlers . . and the unforgettable house with the brown-stone front.

SEE "Home On The Range" . . the window reviving memories of the bold and gallant pioneering days . . and depicting the home on the range, the symbol of the courage which built cities out of wilderness.

SEE "My Modern American Home" . . window of today . . with the skyscrapers silhouetting the skyline that's known in all the 4 corners of the world . . symbolizing home to those who are fighting to preserve our American way of life.

SEE our 26 New Model Rooms . . bedrooms, living-rooms, dining-rooms . . reflecting the quaintness of Early America . . the charm of the 18th century . . and the spirit of today . . all on our block-long furniture floor.

SEE our 5 Roomettes . . inspired by the homes of Provincial America . . adapting the rugged simplicity of the Puritans and the picturesque charm of the Pennsylvania Dutch to modern living.
